

PRO BONO

Opportunities in Oregon

Pro Bono Aspirational Standard

Oregon State Bar Bylaw 13.1

Pro bono publico or pro bono service includes all uncompensated services performed by lawyers for the public good. Such service includes civic, charitable and public service activities; as well as activities that improve the law, the legal system and the legal profession. The direct provision of legal services to the poor, without an expectation of compensation, is one type of pro bono service.

Each lawyer in Oregon should endeavor annually to perform 80 hours of pro bono services. Of this total, the lawyer should endeavor to devote 20 to 40 hours or to handle two cases involving the direct provision of legal services to the poor, without an expectation of compensation.

If a lawyer is unable to provide direct legal services to the poor, the lawyer should endeavor to make a comparable financial contribution to an organization that provides or coordinates the provision of direct legal services to the poor.

Remember to report your pro bono hours for the annual OSB Pro Bono Roll Call.

Introduction

In 1989, the members of the Oregon State Bar adopted an aspirational standard that each lawyer in Oregon should endeavor to perform 80 hours of pro bono services annually, including 20 to 40 hours, or two cases, in direct legal services to the poor. In addition, Section 4.4 of the OSB Statement of Professionalism states that it is a principle of professional practice to engage in pro bono activities, and that all lawyers share an obligation to make legal services available to all members of society.

Oregon lawyers contribute more than half a million dollars annually to the Campaign for Equal Justice to help fund legal aid offices around the state and ensure equal access to justice regardless of economic limitations. In 2005, Oregon lawyers reported more than 37,000 hours of direct Legal representation to the Oregon State Bar Pro Bono Roll Call, and this was probably only a fraction of the hours provided without recognition. Yet, despite efforts by some attorneys and law firms, volunteer services meet only a small portion of the need for low-income residents.

According to the Oregon Legal Needs Study (2000), more than 470,000 low-income Oregonians cannot afford to pay for legal advice and representation in civil matters. Existing legal aid programs can help less than 20% of the need. In Multnomah County alone there are 110,000 low-income residents who simply cannot afford a lawyer. The need extends not only to low-income residents but also to civic, charitable and other public-service organizations.

The tremendous need for legal assistance translates into countless opportunities for Oregon lawyers. While not exhaustive, this handbook is intended to be a guide to some of the opportunities in Oregon, and a stepping-stone for greater involvement among lawyers. Any amount of pro bono service would make a profound difference in the bar's involvement in Oregon. You can commit to pro bono representation without large time commitment. Some clients just need basic advice on how to respond to a landlord, creditor or neighbor. Many pro bono programs offer training for attorneys to gain a solid understanding of the areas of law that most affect low-income persons. Some organizations have bar-certified pro bono programs that offer Professional Liability Fund (PLF) insurance coverage to volunteers. Certified programs are denoted with a single asterisk.

The organizations in this handbook offer a variety of pro bono opportunities to match most practice areas. Each listing includes information on available training, whether volunteers must carry PLF malpractice coverage, and how much time you might expect to devote if you volunteer with a particular program. To volunteer your services, contact the organization of your choice directly.

The information in this handbook was current at the time of printing, but many new opportunities and changes arise between printings. Up-to-date information is available on the Oregon State Bar Pro Bono website at:

www.osbar.org/probono

The need in Oregon is great. But the need creates a tremendous opportunity to demonstrate our belief in equal access to justice, professionalism, and commitment to public service. In short, we have the opportunity to be proud of being lawyers.

Thank you for helping to provide legal services to all Oregon residents.

How This Handbook is Organized

Pro bono opportunities are listed geographically, beginning with statewide opportunities and followed by opportunities available in each county. There are three ways you can find a particular program:

- 1) The table of contents lists the names of all programs organized geographically. If the program you are looking for is not listed in your county, check the Statewide list.
- 2) The Alpha Listing Index lists the names of all programs in alphabetical order. This index also includes a list of pro bono resources.
- 3) The Substantive Listing Index lists all programs organized into the following categories: civil rights and criminal rights; disability; environmental; family law and domestic violence shelters; immigration; legal aid programs; mediation; youth; and other specialized programs. This index also includes a list of pro bono resources.

* Indicates that the program is an OSB Certified Program and that the program may provide malpractice coverage for PLF exempt attorneys engaged in the practice of pro bono service for the program. Attorneys should always check to make sure the coverage is still in effect.

OPPORTUNITIES: Bankruptcy Clinic. The OSB Debtor-Creditor Section and Legal Aid Services of Oregon ("LASO") cosponsor this clinic, which provides information and representation to low-income individuals who are considering bankruptcy or who have already filed as pro se litigants. The project begins with a 45 minute class taught by a member of the bar or bench and a clinic during which volunteer attorneys meet with clients and assess whether ongoing representation is appropriate. The clinic is held on the third Thursday of the month from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. and alternates between Beaverton and Portland locations. Training materials are available.

Domestic Violence Project. Pro bono attorneys represent victims of domestic violence in contested Family Abuse Prevention Act hearings, Elderly and Disabled Abuse Prevention hearings and Stalking Protective Order hearings. The cases tend to have short timelines and limited issues and require a court appearance (often a single contested hearing). This project is an excellent volunteer opportunity for young lawyers, lawyers seeking litigation experience and lawyers who cannot commit to taking long-term cases. Training materials are available, and LASO coordinates a roundtable meeting every other month to share information with volunteers.

Pro Se Assistance Project. In this project, sponsored by LASO and the Multnomah County Family Court, attorneys provide pro bono consultations to individuals served by the Family Court Facilitation Program who require legal advice or document review. Attorneys are scheduled to meet with three clients, each for a 45 minute appointment. Clinics are held from 2:30 to 5 p.m. at the Multnomah County Courthouse. Attorneys respond to discrete family law questions and/or review documents prepared by unrepresented litigants. Attorneys are not expected to provide ongoing representation to clients, and clients sign a retainer agreement detailing the limited scope of the attorney client relationship. Training materials are available.

Senior Law Project. Volunteer lawyers meet with clients over age 60 (or the spouse of clients over age 60) at nine senior centers in Multnomah County. Volunteer lawyers meet with up to six clients at each clinic and provide each client with a 30 minute appointment. Attorneys provide continuing pro bono services for clients who meet LASO's financial eligibility requirements. Common legal issues include estate planning, probate, consumer issues, contracts and insurance matters. LASO sponsors a monthly elder law discussion group to provide information and support on issues of interest to the attorney volunteers.

Social Security Panel. Volunteer attorneys represent disabled clients in Social Security administrative appeals. Training materials are available, and LASO coordinates a monthly roundtable meeting to share information with volunteers.

Stoel Rives Night Clinic. The firm of Stoel Rives, LLP sponsors a legal clinic every other Thursday evening. The clinic is held at the offices of Stoel Rives and the firm is responsible for recruiting the volunteer attorneys. Two volunteer meet with up to four clients each clinic. The following issues are referred to the clinic: consumer, small claims, criminal record expungements, landlord/tenant damage claims, Social Security cases, estate planning, uncontested guardianships, uninsured motorist defense, veterans benefits, and nonprofit incorporation.

OTHER: PLF coverage is available for all of these projects. All of these projects are OSB-certified and 40 hours or more of service may qualify volunteers for recognition by the OSB.
