American Indian tribes have a unique governmental status that allows for a special set of legal considerations. Expand and enhance your legal practice by understanding the specific laws related to federal, state, and tribal jurisdictional matters. This program provides a wealth of information covering current federal Indian law topics including tribal economic development, tribes as government stakeholders, and tribal courts. A federal Indian case law and legislative update will highlight recent key federal and tribal court cases and Oregon legislative updates. Examine the evolution of federal agency tribal policies and programs. Explore hot topics and recent developments in the Indian Child Welfare Act.
