Preface

This Reporter contains final decisions of the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board. The Disciplinary Board Reporter should be cited as 6 DB Rptr 1 (1992).

A decision of the Disciplinary Board is final if the charges against the accused are dismissed, a public reprimand is imposed, or the accused is suspended from practice for up to sixty (60) days and neither the Bar nor the accused have sought review by the Supreme Court. See Title 10 of the Oregon State Bar Rules of Procedure, p. 257 of the 1993 Membership Directory, and ORS 9.536.

It should be noted that the decisions printed herein have been placed in what has been determined to be an appropriate format, taking care not to modify in any substantive way the decision of the Trial Panel in each case. Those interested in a verbatim copy of an opinion should contact me at 620-0222 or 1-800-452-8260, extension 404. Final decisions of the Disciplinary Board issued on or after January 1, 1993 are also available from me at the Oregon State Bar upon request. Please note that the statutes, disciplinary rules and rules of procedure cited in the opinions were those in existence at the time the opinions were issued. The statutes and rules may have since been changed or renumbered. Care should be taken to locate the current language of a statute or rule sought to be relied on concerning a new matter.

Questions concerning this reporter or the bar’s disciplinary process in general may be directed to the undersigned. We hope this publication proves helpful to those interested in or affected by the bar’s disciplinary procedures.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of
   J. SCOTT McALISTER, Accused.

Case No. 90-125

Bar Counsel: Tomas F. Ryan, Esq.
Counsel for the Accused: None

Trial Panel: Arno H. Denecke, Chairperson; Mary Grimes, Esq.; Debra K. Vassallo (Public Member)

Effective Date of Opinion: January 3, 1992
The Oregon State Bar and the Accused, J. Scott McAlister, stipulated to the facts. They are that in October 1990 a Utah court convicted the Accused, on a plea of guilty, of the crime of distribution of pornographic material, Sec. 76-10-1204(1)(a), Utah Code Annotated, a Class A Misdemeanor. The Accused served his sentence, seven days in jail, the minimum sentence.

The bar notified the Oregon Supreme Court of the conviction and the Court referred the matter to the disciplinary board. The bar filed a complaint in June 1991. The complaint charged Accused violated ORS 9.527(2). That statute provides the Court may discipline a member of the bar if, "(2) The member has been convicted in any jurisdiction of an offense which is a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude . . . ."

Whether the Accused should be disciplined depends upon whether the offense of which he was convicted involves moral turpitude.

Because this issue is a purely legal one, the Accused and the bar agreed no evidentiary hearing was necessary and this issue can be decided by the panel based on the stipulation and legal memoranda submitted by the parties.

The conviction arose from the following facts:

"In or about September 1980, the Accused came into possession of two video films which the parties agree constituted child pornography. The films were exhibits in a criminal proceeding and the Accused represented the State of Oregon in a subsequent habeas corpus matter filed on behalf of the criminal defendant. The films were released to the Accused pursuant to an order of the Multnomah County Circuit Court. When the Accused no longer needed the films for purposes relating to the habeas corpus proceeding, he did not return them to the court and still possessed them years later when he relocated to Utah and moved his possessions there. The Accused maintains his failure to return the films to the court was inadvertent. For the purposes of this stipulation, the Bar does not contend that the Accused's failure to return the films to the court was improper.

"In or about June 1989, the Accused delivered a box of video films to Linda Dreitzler, an acquaintance of the Accused's in Salt Lake City, Utah. The two pornographic films were among the films delivered, a fact of which the Accused was aware."

[In] In re Chase, 299 Or 391-399[sic], 702 P2d 1082 (1985), the Court stated the method to be used in determining whether an offense involved moral turpitude[:]

"... [T]he category of misdemeanors involving moral turpitude is fixed with reference to the nature and elements of the crime and without consideration of the specific circumstances of a case. Interpreting moral turpitude in this way avoids the difficulties of lack of notice and definitional precision which attend the variable, fact-specific alternative."

The Accused seeks to circumvent this narrow scope of inquiry by contending, "it ignores the possibility that a statute can be violated in more than one way which may alter the intent analysis." Pursuant to this reasoning Accused urges us to consider a statement he made which is described by Accused as part of a document filed with the court identifying the factual basis upon which the judgment was entered. The statement was that the Accused gave the films to his acquaintance 'for disposal.'"[sic]

We will not consider this statement. First, because it is not part of the stipulated facts; second, it attempts to introduce "specific circumstances of the case," contrary to In re Chase.

The statute under which Accused was convicted provides, "(1) A person is guilty of distributing pornographic material when he knowingly:

"(a) sends or brings any pornographic material into the State with intent to distribute or exhibit it to others."

With the conviction it must be conclusively assumed that every element of the offense has been proved or admitted.
In order for the crime to involve moral turpitude, the Court in Chase held it must require, (1) "an intentional mental state" as distinguished from merely a negligent state of mind [and]; (2) contain at least one element from among the following: fraud, deceit or dishonesty; illegal activity undertaken for personal gain; or harm to a specific victim.

Accused argues, when the statute provides the actor must "knowingly" bring pornographic material into the state, all the state is required to prove is that the actor knew he brought property into the state; state need not prove the actor knew it was pornographic material. Such an interpretation is not only strained, but is contrary to the applicable statute[.]. Sec. 76-10-1201, Utah Code Annotated provides, "(4) ‘Knowingly’ means an awareness, whether actual or constructive, of the character of material . . . ."

Accused also contends the Utah statute does not require the other requirement of In re Chase, that is, [that] there be a specific victim. Accused urges that requirement needs a statute requiring an identifiable victim.

In In re Chase, the Accused attorney was convicted of possession of cocaine. The particular statute under which he was convicted has no element of distributing, simply possession. The Court held under such a statute there was not a specific victim.

The Court, however, made the distinction between mere possession and possession with the intent to distribute. The Court made it clear that a statute making possession of contraband with the intent to distribute to someone, not necessarily named or identified, was a statute requiring a specific victim.

The purpose of statutes such as the Utah statute under which Accused was convicted is to shield people from being the distributees of pornographic material.
The class of persons to whom Accused intended to distribute the material is the victim.

The intention to distribute pornographic material might not be regarded as heinous as the intent to distribute contraband drugs, but Utah and other states have made it a crime.

We conclude that the crime of which Accused was convicted is an offense involving moral turpitude.

The Bar and Accused have stipulated that, if we conclude the misdemeanor for which the Accused was convicted involves moral turpitude, a public reprimand is an appropriate sanction.

We are of the opinion we are not bound by that stipulation; however, we are also of the opinion that it is appropriate. The Accused has no prior record of any disciplinary proceedings against him. He did not engage in the conduct leading to his conviction for personal monetary gain. We have been informed of no facts that the distributee of the material suffered any emotional harm.

In Re: Complaint as to the Conduct of MARY L. STASACK, Accused. Case No. 91-60

DECISION AND ORDER

A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson of the Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to Bar Rule 3.6(e). The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve the matters set out in a previously filed Complaint by the Bar against the Accused.

The Stipulation recites that during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to a resolution of the proceedings and this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate the Accused at all material times was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon, having her current place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused neglected a legal matter in the representation of one Barbara Lee Orloff in connection with a dissolution of marriage.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes neglect of a legal matter in violation of DR 6-101(8) of the Code of Professional Responsibility established by law and by the Oregon State Bar.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept a public reprimand for her violation of DR 6-101(8).

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has no prior record of reprimand, suspension or other disciplinary sanction.
The Regional Chairperson and State Chairperson, on behalf of the Disciplinary Board, approve the Stipulation and sanction.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be disciplined as set forth above for violation of DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

DATED this 16th day of February, 1992.

Region 5 Chairperson
Mary L. Stasack, attorney at law, (hereinafter, "the Accused") and the Oregon State Bar (hereinafter, "the Bar"), hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Oregon State Bar Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

1. The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2. The Accused, Mary L. Stasack, is and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law duly admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having her office and place of business Multnomah County, State of Oregon.

3. The Accused enters into this Stipulation for Discipline freely and voluntarily. This Stipulation is made under the restrictions of Rule of Procedure 3.6(h).

4. On August 3, 1991, the State Professional Responsibility Board (hereinafter "the Board") authorized the filing of a formal complaint against the Accused alleging that the Accused had violated DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

The Accused represented Barbara Lee Orloff in a dissolution of marriage. In January, 1986, the Accused agreed to prepare a qualified domestic relations order to protect Orloff’s rights to her former husband’s pension. Between February, 1986 and December, 1990, the Accused neglected to prepare the order. After opposing counsel’s requested revisions were done, the Accused then presented it for signature and docketing in February of 1991.

During some or all of the years between January, 1986 and January, 1991, the Accused suffered from cancer, undergoing surgery. The Accused also suffered from oncology depression and has been under the treatment of a psychiatrist and a clinical psychologist. The Accused has, furthermore, recognized that she has a dependency upon alcohol and has been in recovery, i.e. has not consumed alcohol for a period of 3 1/2 years.

7.

The Accused admits that her conduct described in paragraph 5 herein is neglect of a legal matter in violation of DR 6-101(B).

8.

Pursuant to the above admissions and BR 3.6(c)(iii), the Accused agrees to accept a public reprimand for her violation of DR 6-101(B).

9.

The Accused has no prior record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment.

10.

This Stipulation for Discipline is subject to approval by the Board and review by Disciplinary Counsel of the Oregon State Bar. If the Board approves this stipulation, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6(e).

Case No. 90-52
Accused.

OPINION OF TRIAL PANEL

THIS MATTER came for hearing before the trial panel of the Oregon State Bar on November 26-27, 1991, the Oregon State Bar being represented by Mary Cooper and Donald Crane; the accused, James F. Bodie, appearing in person and through his attorney, John Copenhaver; the trial panel, consisting of Blair Henderson, Dr. Wallace Wolf, and Sam Tucker; and the trial panel having heard the evidence and having reviewed the memorandums and arguments, and having considered all of the evidence, does hereby find as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Accused was the corporate attorney for Pine Products Corporation, a corporation jointly owned by Crawfords and Rhodens until he resigned in September, 1987. The Accused represented the Crawfords, Rhodens, and Craig Woodward, and their various business ventures throughout this time period.

2.

In 1989, the Accused drew papers involving a three-way land swap between the Rhoden, Crawford, and Woodward families and their businesses.
3.

The Accused was asked by the three principals to draw up the documents for the land swap. Crawford indicated that he would have the documents reviewed by attorney, Patrick Jenson.

4.

The evidence concerning who the Accused represented in this land swap was in dispute:

(A) Crawford understood that the Accused represented all of the parties. Crawford and his businesses were also represented by Patrick Jenson.

(B) Jenson represented the Crawford family or their business interest on various matters starting in 1985, including the representation of Pine Products Corporation in the drafting of a deferred compensation agreement with the Accused. He became corporate counsel for Pine Products Corporation in September, 1989. Mr. Jenson represented the Crawford family and Pine Products Corporation in the land swap. Jenson understood that the Accused also represented Pine Products Corporation, a company controlled by Crawfords in the land swap.

(C) Mr. Woodward understood that the Accused was [sic] represented Mr. Rhoden and Mr. Woodward in the land swap.

(D) Mr. Rhoden understood that the Accused represented Mr. Rhoden and Mr. Woodward in the land swap.

(E) The Accused understood that he represented Mr. Woodward and Mr. Rhoden in the land swap. He specifically denied representing the Crawfords or Pine Products Corporation since his resignation as attorney for Pine Products in 1987.

(F) After the land swap documents were signed, the three principals, Crawford, Rhoden, and Woodward agreed to split the Accused attorney’s fees equally among themselves, and Crawford instructed the Accused that 2/3 of the bill should be sent to Pine Products Corporation.

5. Based on the conflicting testimony and after weighing the evidence and credibility of the witnesses, the trial panel is not convinced by clear and convincing evidence that the Accused represented the Crawford family, Pine Products Corporation, or any of the Crawford family businesses in the 1989 land swap.

6. The Accused represented both Woodward and Rhoden on the land swap. Both had signed documents waiving any conflict. Neither person raised any complaint concerning the ethical conduct of the Accused. Both claimed that they were adequately advised and represented by the Accused in the matter and waived any conflict claim. Both testified on behalf of the Accused.

CONCLUSION

The Oregon State Bar was not able to show by clear and convincing evidence that the Accused represented the Crawfords or their corporation in the 1989 land transaction. The Accused violated no ethical rules by representing current clients (Rhoden and Woodward) against former clients independently represented by another attorney.
DISPOSITION

Based upon the conclusion stated above, the proceedings against the Accused should be dismissed.

In Re:

Complaint as to the Conduct of

THOMAS C. HOWSER,

OPINION

Accused.

On October 22, 1990, the Accused pled guilty in the Douglas County District Court of violating ORS 811.700(a), "Failure to Perform Duties of [a] Driver When Property is Damaged." The matter was referred to the State Professional Responsibility Board by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon on January 9, 1991, for a determination of what, if any, discipline was appropriate. On June 4, 1991, the Oregon State Bar filed a formal Complaint alleging that the conviction was for a Misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, a violation of ORS 9.527(2).

Because the Answer filed by the Accused admitted all allegations of the formal Complaint except that the offense is a Misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, the Bar and the Accused agreed that the issue before the Trial Panel is purely legal rather than factual. The parties therefore agreed that an evidentiary hearing would not be necessary and that the matter could be decided by the Panel based upon the legal memoranda and oral argument submitted by the parties.

Pursuant to stipulation of the parties, a hearing was held by telephone conference call on February 3, 1992. After considering the memoranda and oral arguments of the parties, the hearing was adjourned and the matter was considered by the Trial Panel outside of the presence of the parties and counsel.

In deciding this case, the Trial Panel relied heavily on In re:[sic] Chase, 299 Or 391-399[sic], 702 P2d 1082 (1985). In that case the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon determined that a Lawyer convicted of attempted possession of cocaine, a Class A Misdemeanor, was not subject to discipline under ORS 9.725(2)[sic] because the conviction was not a Misdemeanor involving moral turpitude within the meaning of that statute. In so holding, the Court established certain criteria that must be satisfied before any particular criminal conviction could be established as a crime involving moral turpitude. Chase requires that the Trial Panel determine, without reference to the underlying facts of the case, whether the elements of ORS 811.700 satisfy the following two part test:

1. Does the offense require the Accused to possess the requisite mental state of intent or knowledge; and
2. Does the offense contain at least one of the following elements:
   a. Fraud, deceit, or dishonesty;
   b. Illegal activity undertaken for personal gain;
   c. Harm to a specific victim.

The Trial Panel is of the opinion that every conviction under ORS 811.700 would not necessarily require at least one element from the second section of the two part test. For example, a person could violate the statute by failing to provide the other driver of the name and address of all of the other occupants of the vehicle in violation of ORS 811.700(1)(a)(C), even though he complied with all other provisions of the statute and provided the names and addresses of several, but not all of the occupants. Since Chase bars consideration of the particular facts, and limits the inquiry to the statute itself, the second portion of the test has not been satisfied. One could easily imagine what might be called a "technical" violation of this section of the statute such as the above illustration, not involving fraud, deceit, dishonesty, illegal activity undertaken for personal gain, or harm to a specific victim.

In reaching this conclusion, it should be noted that the Panel experienced some frustration because of the limitations of the Panel's inquiry required by Chase. It might very well be that a review of the underlying facts would demonstrate a very severe violation of ORS 811.700 which would satisfy the Chase test and constitute a violation of ORS 9.527(2).

However, because the underlying facts could not be considered, the Panel concluded that the second part of the two part test required by Chase had not been met. The Panel concluded that it was therefore unnecessary to reach a decision on the issue of whether ORS 811.700 required the requisite mental state of intent or knowledge.

The Panel finds the Accused not guilty.

DECISION AND ORDER

A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson of the Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to Bar Rule 3.6(e). The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve the matter set out in a previously filed Complaint by the Bar against the Accused.

The Stipulation recites that during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to resolution of the proceedings and this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate the Accused at all material times, was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon, and has his current place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused failed to withdraw from representation after discharge and neglected a legal matter in the representation of a client to wit: KRRB Partnership.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct in violation of DR 2-110(B)(4) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, and DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility established by law and by the Oregon State Bar, as alleged in the Bar’s Formal Complaint.

The Accused admits his violation of DR 2-110(B)(4), and DR 6-101(B), of the Code of Professional Responsibility as alleged in the Bar’s Formal Complaint.
Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept the following designated form of discipline in exchange for the herein described stipulations:

1. The Accused agrees to a public reprimand for having violated the ethical rules specified herein and described in the Bar's Formal Complaint.

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has no prior record of reprimands, suspensions or disbarment.

The Regional Chairperson and State Chairperson, on behalf of the Disciplinary Board, approve the Stipulation and sanction.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be disciplined as set forth above for violation of DR 2-110(B)(4) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, and DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

Kevin O'Connell, attorney at law, (the Accused) and the Oregon State Bar (the Bar) hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c):

1. The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2. The Accused is, and at all times mentioned herein, was an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

3. The Accused enters into this stipulation freely and voluntarily.

4. On June 8, 1991, the State Professional Responsibility Board (SPRB) authorized the filing of a formal complaint alleging that the Accused violated DR 2-110(B)(4) and DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility in a matter originally brought to the Bar’s attention by R.S. Ballantyne, M.D. The parties wish to resolve this disciplinary matter with this Stipulation for Discipline.

The facts upon which this stipulation is based are as follows:

In or about May 1988, the Accused undertook to represent several individuals who were partners in a partnership known as KRRB, formed in 1982. The purpose of the partnership when formed was to acquire or lease medical scanning equipment.
The Accused was retained to pursue a legal malpractice claim against the original partnership lawyer regarding the disallowance by the Internal Revenue Service of investment tax credits due to alleged errors made in structuring the acquisition or lease of the scanning equipment.

After undertaking the representation, the Accused failed to take any significant action in furtherance of his clients’ claim from May 1988 until January 1989, failed to communicate with his clients or provide status reports to them between May 1988 and March 1989 and failed to return phone messages or respond to written inquiries from his clients inquiring as to the Accused’s efforts on their behalves.

On or about April 25, 1989, and again on or about May 26, 1989, the clients notified the Accused in writing that he was discharged from further representation of them. Thereafter, until November 1989, the Accused failed to withdraw from representing the clients in the legal malpractice claim and continued to provide legal services to them.

The Accused agrees that the above-described conduct constituted violations of DR 6-101(B), neglect of a legal matter, and DR 2-110(B)(4), failing to withdraw from representation after discharge.
7. The Accused agrees to accept a public reprimand for his conduct.

8. The Accused has no prior record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment since his admission to practice in 1966.

9. This Stipulation for Discipline is subject to review by Disciplinary Counsel and to approval by the SPRB. If the SPRB approves the Stipulation for Discipline, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6.

The Stipulation recites that during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to a resolution of the proceedings and this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate that the Accused, at all material times, was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon. Since 1972 he was a member of the Oregon State Bar having his current place of business in the County of Lane, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused committed a conflict of interest violation and improperly communicated with a represented party without opposing counsel’s consent.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct in violation of DR 5-105(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, DR 5-105(E) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, and DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility established by law and by the Oregon State Bar, as alleged in the Bar’s Formal Complaint.
The Accused admits his violation of the aforementioned rules of the Code of Professional Responsibility as alleged in the Bar's Formal Complaint.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept the following designated form of discipline in exchange for the herein described stipulations:

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of KEITH W. THOMPSON, Accused.

Case No. 90-134
STIPULATION FOR DISCIPLINE

Keith W. Thompson, attorney at law, (the Accused) and the Oregon State Bar (the Bar) hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2.

The Accused is, and at all times mentioned herein, was an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Lane, State of Oregon.

3.

The Accused enters into this stipulation freely and voluntarily. This stipulation is made under the restrictions set forth in Rule of Procedure 3.6(h).

On June 8, 1991, the State Professional Responsibility Board (SPRB) authorized the filing of a formal complaint against the Accused alleging violations of former DR 5-105(A), DR 5-105(C), DR 5-105(E) and DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility. A copy of the Bar’s formal complaint is attached hereto and incorporated by this reference herein. The parties stipulate to the following facts regarding the allegations in the formal complaint.

FIRST CAUSE OF COMPLAINT

In November 1987, the Accused undertook to represent Patricia Ann Couch (hereinafter "Couch") regarding a business matter arising out of a partnership between Couch and Robert G. Holcomb, III (hereinafter "Holcomb"), that involved initially the operation of a restaurant. Couch consulted the Accused regarding the sale of her interest in the partnership. Her desire to sell her interest was prompted by disagreements she was having with Holcomb at the time. No sale ensued.

In January 1988, the Accused represented both Couch and Holcomb in discussions concerning business partnership matters. Couch and Holcomb were also domestic partners at the time, of which the Accused was aware. The Accused again consulted with and rendered legal services to Couch and Holcomb in June, July and August of 1988 concerning business partnership matters including the purchase by Couch and Holcomb of the building which housed a feed and garden supply store and the restaurant Couch and Holcomb were then operating.

In August 1988, the business and domestic relationship between Couch and Holcomb deteriorated. Couch obtained a restraining order against Holcomb under the Family Abuse Prevention Act. She also retained attorney Claud Ingram who filed on Couch’s behalf a civil complaint in Lane County Circuit Court, Couch v. Holcomb, seeking recovery for breach of contract, quantum meruit, unjust enrichment and breach of implied partnership agreement, all related to the Couch and Holcomb business partnership, and for assault and battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress, arising out of their domestic difficulties.

On behalf of Holcomb, the Accused corresponded with attorney Ingram, seeking Couch's consent to the Accused's representation of Holcomb in the Couch v. Holcomb litigation. Through counsel, Couch refused to give such consent.

8.

Despite the refusal of consent by Couch, the Accused advised Holcomb how to make an appearance in the Couch v. Holcomb litigation to prevent a default, drafted and had his staff prepare a general denial for Holcomb to sign pro se and, on September 9, 1988, filed the answer with the court on Holcomb's behalf.

9.

By rendering legal services to Holcomb regarding the Couch v. Holcomb lawsuit, the allegations of which were significantly related to the representation provided by the Accused to Couch and Holcomb in their business affairs, the Accused committed a conflict of interest violation contrary to former DR 5-105(A) [current DR 5-105(C) and (E)].

SECOND CAUSE OF COMPLAINT

On or about September 12, 1988, Holcomb advised the Accused that Holcomb and Couch had reconciled and inquired of the Accused how to facilitate the dismissal of the Couch v. Holcomb lawsuit and continued discussions with the Accused regarding Couch and Holcomb's business matters. The Accused advised Holcomb that if Couch would terminate her attorney-client relationship with attorney Ingram, the Accused could and would consult with both Holcomb and Couch regarding a dismissal of Couch v. Holcomb and their business interests.

At Holcomb’s request, the Accused then drafted and had his staff prepare a letter dated September 13, 1988, to be signed by Couch in which Couch terminated attorney Ingram’s services. Holcomb took the letter, procured Couch’s signature on it and returned it to the Accused, at which time it was mailed from the Accused’s office to attorney Ingram.

Couch later alleged that Holcomb had coerced her into signing the letter of September 13, 1988. In fact, Couch later again retained attorney Ingram and the Couch v. Holcomb lawsuit was not dismissed.

By drafting the letter to be used by Holcomb for the purpose of having Couch terminate her lawyer in the Couch v. Holcomb litigation, the Accused caused Holcomb to communicate with a represented party (Couch) on the subject of the representation without opposing counsel’s consent in violation of DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

THIRD AND FOURTH CAUSES OF COMPLAINT

Subsequent to September 13, 1988, the Accused did not know and did not inquire whether the Couch v. Holcomb lawsuit was dismissed by Couch or was still pending. Nor did the Accused know or inquire whether Couch was still represented by attorney Ingram in that or any other matter.

Nevertheless, the Accused continued to represent Couch and Holcomb regarding their business matters in November and December of 1988 and into January, 1989. During this period, the sellers of the feed and garden supply store
Couch and Holcomb were purchasing filed for bankruptcy; the trustee in bankruptcy was making demands on Couch and Holcomb as purchasers and tenants of the building; Couch and Holcomb were experiencing financial difficulty having failed to make timely payments to their contract vendor and other creditors; and attempts were made by Couch and Holcomb to resell or lease the feed store to others. The Accused provided legal assistance to Couch and Holcomb regarding these various business matters.

The Accused also began to represent Couch during this same period on a municipal traffic charge.

In December 1988, the Accused learned that Purina Mills, Inc., (hereinafter "Purina") had filed a lawsuit against Couch and Holcomb in Lane County District Court for 3 NSF checks written to Purina by Holcomb on a Couch and Holcomb business account. The Accused discussed the matter with Couch and Holcomb individually. On or about January 9, 1989, and thereafter, Couch advised the Accused of her distrust of Holcomb and expressed concern over Holcomb's conduct regarding their business partnership affairs.

The Accused advised Couch to obtain separate counsel and indicated that he would [be] continue to represent Holcomb regarding their business partnership matters. Thereafter, in January, February and March of 1989, and despite the conflict between the partners, the Accused rendered legal services on behalf of the business partnership, although in the Accused's mind his client was Holcomb only. Those services included drafting a lease for the feed and garden supply store which both Holcomb and Couch signed as lessors on or about January 18, 1989; corresponding with Purina on behalf of both Couch and Holcomb to forestall collection action by that creditor; asserting to another creditor that Couch and Holcomb were good faith purchasers of certain equipment in which the creditor claimed a security interest; negotiating a settlement of the Purina claim in the form of a stipulated judgment which at first named both Couch and Holcomb as the judgment debtors but was subsequently amended to delete Couch; negotiating with the trustee in bankruptcy regarding the purchase of the garden and feed store building; and discussing with various creditors of the business partnership regarding outstanding debts for which both Couch and Holcomb were potentially liable.

The Accused also continued to represent Couch on the municipal traffic charge, concluding the matter in late March, 1989.

14. At various times during the course of the Accused’s representation of Couch, Holcomb and their business partnership, the interests of Couch and Holcomb were adverse as described above in this stipulation. The Accused knew or should have known that the interests of Couch and Holcomb were adverse.

15. To the extent disclosure and consent may have been available to cure conflicts of interest between Couch and Holcomb, at no time during the course of his representation of his clients did the Accused make full and adequate disclosure to, or obtain the informed consent from, Couch and Holcomb regarding the Accused’s continued representation of either or both of them.

16. By representing Couch and Holcomb at times when their interests were in actual or likely conflict and, after he believed his attorney-client relationship with Couch had ended, by continuing to represent Holcomb and the business partnership interests in the face of disputes between the partners, the Accused violated DR 5-105(C) and DR 5-105(E) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.
SANCTION

17. Pursuant to the terms of this stipulation and BR 3.6(c)(iii), the Accused agrees to accept a 60-day suspension from the practice of law for a violation of the disciplinary rules cited herein.

18. The Accused has no prior record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment since his admission to practice law in 1972.

19. This stipulation is subject to review by Disciplinary Counsel and to approval by the SPRB. If the SPRB approves the stipulation for discipline, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6.

IN THE SUPREME COURT

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of
KEITH W. THOMPSON, Accused.

Case No. 90-134
FORMAL COMPLAINT

For its FIRST CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

1.

The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS, Chapter 9, relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2.

The Accused, Keith W. Thompson, is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Lane, State of Oregon.

3.

Beginning in or about November 1987, the Accused undertook to represent Patricia Ann Couch (hereinafter "Couch") and, beginning in or about January, 1988, the Accused undertook to represent Robert G. Holcomb, III (hereinafter "Holcomb"), regarding a business partnership that involved initially the operation of a restaurant. Couch and Holcomb were both business and domestic partners, of which the Accused was aware.
4.

Prior to August 1988, the business and domestic relationship between Couch and Holcomb deteriorated. In or about August 1988, Couch, through another lawyer, filed a lawsuit against Holcomb in Lane County Circuit Court asserting a number of claims related to an alleged breach of their business agreement, the winding up of their partnership and an alleged assault and battery. Couch also obtained a temporary restraining order against Holcomb to prevent further, alleged domestic violence.

5.

On behalf of Holcomb, the Accused sought Couch's consent to the Accused’s representation of Holcomb in the Couch v. Holcomb litigation. Through counsel, Couch refused to give consent.

6.

Despite the refusal of consent by Couch, the Accused drafted an answer to the Couch v. Holcomb complaint for Holcomb to sign pro se. The Accused also filed the answer in court on Holcomb’s behalf. Thereafter, the Accused consulted with Holcomb from time to time regarding the Couch v. Holcomb lawsuit.

7.

The subject matter of the Couch v. Holcomb litigation was significantly related to the representation provided by the Accused to Couch and Holcomb regarding their business and domestic relationship.

The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standards of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. Former DR 5-105(A) [current DR 5-105(C) and DR 5-105(E)] of the Code of Professional Responsibility.
AND, for its SECOND CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

9. Incorporates by reference as fully set forth herein, paragraphs 1 through 7 of its First Cause of Complaint.

10. In or about September 1988, shortly after drafting and filing an answer in Couch v. Holcomb on behalf of Holcomb, the Accused drafted at Holcomb’s request a letter to be signed by Couch in which Couch purports to terminate her lawyer in the Couch v. Holcomb litigation. Holcomb took the draft letter, procured Couch’s signature on it and returned it to the Accused, at which time it was mailed to Couch’s lawyer.

11. By drafting the letter to be used by Holcomb for the purpose of having Couch terminate her lawyer in the Couch v. Holcomb litigation, the Accused caused another to communicate with a represented party on the subject of the representation.

12. Neither Holcomb nor the Accused had the prior consent of Couch’s lawyer to contact or communicate directly with Couch.

13. The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

AND, for its THIRD CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:
14.

Incorporates by reference as fully set forth herein paragraphs 1 through 6 of the First Cause of Complaint.

15.

In or about November 1988 Holcomb and Couch were sued in Lane County District Court by Purina Mills, Inc. (hereinafter "Purina"), for 3 NSF checks written to Purina by Holcomb on a Holcomb and Couch business account.

16.

The Accused negotiated a settlement of the Purina claim in the form of a stipulated judgment, on behalf of the defendants. The stipulated judgment was subsequently modified to reflect that the Accused was authorized to represent only Holcomb in the settlement and that he did not represent Couch.

17.

The subject matter of the Purina v. Holcomb and Couch litigation was significantly related to the representation provided by the Accused to Couch and Holcomb regarding their business relationship. It was likely the interests of Couch and Holcomb in the Purina matter would be adverse to one another.

18.

The Accused did not make full disclosure or obtain informed consent from Couch regarding the Accused's representation of Holcomb in the Purina litigation.

19.

The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 5-105(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

AND, for its FOURTH AND FINAL CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:
Incorporates by reference as fully set forth herein paragraphs 1 through 6, and 10 and 15-16 of this complaint.

21.
The Accused continued to represent Couch and Holcomb in various matters from November 1987 until at least January 1989 and possibly as late as April 1989. During this period, the Accused knew or should have know[n] that domestic and business issues of contention existed between Couch and Holcomb such that their interests were adverse.

22.
The Accused failed to make full disclosure to or obtain informed consent from Couch and Holcomb regarding the Accused's continued representation of them despite their interests being adverse.

23.
The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 5-105(E) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

WHEREFORE, the Oregon State Bar demands that the Accused make answer to this complaint; that a hearing be set concerning the charges made herein; that the matters alleged herein be fully, properly and legally determined; and pursuant thereto, such action be taken as may be just and proper under the circumstances.

EXECUTED this 28th day of January, 1992.

OF THE STATE OF OREGON

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of
BRAD BENZIGER,
Accused.

Case No. 90-133

Bar Counsel: Vivian Raits Solomon, Esq.
Counsel for the Accused: Brad Benziger, pro se

Disciplinary Board: James M. Gleeson, State Chairperson; Anthony A. Buccino, Region 5 Chairperson.

Disposition: Violation of DR 1-102(A)(1), DR 1-102(A)(3), DR 6-101(A) and DR 6-101(B). Disciplinary Board approval of stipulation for discipline. Thirty-day suspension.

Effective Date of Opinion: August 3, 1992
A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the State Chairperson and the Region 5 Chairperson of the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to BR 3.6(e). The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve the matters set out in a previously filed Formal Complaint.

The Stipulation recites that, during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to a resolution of the proceedings and that this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate that the Accused at all material times was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to the practice of law in Oregon, maintaining his current place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused neglected a legal matter and failed to provide competent legal representation in connection with a foreclosure matter undertaken on behalf of a client. It further appears that the Accused provided his client, both directly and through a member of his staff, with inaccurate information regarding the status of the foreclosure in the form of assurances that he would complete the matter within a specific time frame. The Accused failed to complete the foreclosure by the dates promised.
The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation in violation of DR 1-102(A)(3), violating a disciplinary rule through the act of another in violation of DR 1-102(A)(1), failure to provide competent representation in violation of DR 6-101(A) and neglect of a legal matter in violation of DR 6-101(B) as alleged in the Bar’s Formal Complaint.

The Accused admits that his conduct violated DR 1-102(A)(1), DR 1-102(A)(3), DR 6-101(A) and DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility as alleged in the Bar’s Complaint.

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has no prior record of reprimand, suspension or other disciplinary sanction.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept a 30-day suspension from the practice of law.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be suspended from the practice of law for 30 days beginning August 3, 1992 for his violations of DR 1-102(A)(1), DR 1-102(A)(3), DR 6-101(A) and DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

DATED this 11th day of August, 1992, nunc pro tunc August 3, 1992.

DATED this 13th day of August, 1992, nunc pro tunc August 3, 1992.

Anthony A. Buccino
Region 5 Chairperson
Brad Benziger, attorney at law, and the Oregon State Bar hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

1. The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2. Mr. Benziger is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

3. At its meeting of March 30, 1991, the Oregon State Bar’s State Professional Responsibility Board (SPRB) authorized the filing of a formal complaint alleging that Mr. Benziger violated DR 1-102(A)(1), DR 1-102(A)(3), DR 6-101(A) and DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility in connection with his representation of Dayne L. Tune in a foreclosure action. Mr. Benziger accepted service of the Oregon State Bar’s formal complaint on January 24, 1992 and filed his answer on February 20, 1992.

A copy of the formal complaint is attached hereto as Exhibit 1 and incorporated herein by this reference.

5.

Mr. Benziger enters into this stipulation freely and voluntarily.

6.

Mr. Benziger admits that he engaged in the conduct alleged in the First Cause of Complaint of the formal complaint and stipulates that his conduct violated DR 6-101(A) (failing to provide competent representation) and DR 6-101(B) (neglecting a legal matter entrusted to the lawyer) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

7.

Mr. Benziger admits that on several occasions he provided his client, Mr. Tune, inaccurate information regarding the status of his foreclosure action (as alleged in paragraphs 14, 15 and 16 of the Second Cause of Complaint). He stipulates that his conduct violated DR 1-102(A)(3) (engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation). Mr. Benziger does not recall instructing his secretary in December 1989 to advise Mr. Tune that the default order had been signed (as alleged in paragraph 17 of the formal complaint) and he therefore does not admit that allegation. However, Mr. Benziger acknowledges that the Bar could introduce evidence supporting that allegation and he therefore stipulates that he violated DR 1-102(A)(1) (violating a disciplinary rule through the acts of another).

As a result of the violations set forth herein, Mr. Benziger agrees to a 30-day suspension from the practice of law.
9.

Mr. Benziger and the Bar stipulate that Mr. Benziger could submit evidence of the following mitigating factors, as described in the American Bar Association’s Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions (1991): absence of prior discipline; absence of a dishonest or selfish motive; personal problems; timely good faith effort to rectify the consequences of his misconduct; cooperative attitude toward the disciplinary proceedings; interim rehabilitation; and remorse. The parties further stipulate that the Bar could submit evidence of the following aggravating factor set forth in Standards: substantial experience in the practice of law.

10.

Mr. Benziger explains the circumstances surrounding his violation of the foregoing standards of professional conduct on Exhibit B, attached hereto and incorporated herein by this reference. However, Mr. Benziger acknowledges that his explanation does not justify his conduct and is not a defense to the charges that he violated the ethical rules specified herein.

11.

This Stipulation for Discipline is subject to review by Disciplinary Counsel of the Oregon State Bar and to approval by the SPRB. If approved by the SPRB, the parties agree that the stipulation is to be submitted to the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6.

For its FIRST CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

1. The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9, relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2. The Accused, Brad Benziger, is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

3. On or about January 1989, the Accused undertook representation of Dayne L. Tune (Tune) to foreclose on a house that Tune had sold on contract to two buyers. One of the buyers had already delivered a deed to Tune. Tune provided the relevant documentation, including the deed, to the Accused.

After initiating the foreclosure proceeding in Multnomah County Circuit Court on June 7, 1989, the Accused failed to take steps necessary to prosecute the foreclosure action against the other buyer.

5.

From March 1989 through April 1990, the Accused avoided responding to telephone calls and letters from Tune, who was inquiring as to the status of the foreclosure action.

6.

The foreclosure action was dismissed for want of prosecution by order dated October 6, 1989. The Accused obtained a reinstatement order on or about November 6, 1989.

7.

The Accused did not record the deed until May 1990.

8.

The Accused did not obtain a default judgment in the foreclosure action until May 1990.

9.

The Accused lacked the legal knowledge and skill reasonably necessary to handle the foreclosure on behalf of Tune.

10.

By undertaking a foreclosure action on behalf of Tune when he lacked the legal knowledge and skill necessary to handle such an action, the Accused failed to provide competent representation to Tune.
By failing to take steps to prosecute the foreclosure action and by avoiding communications from Tune, the Accused neglected a legal matter entrusted to him.

The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standards of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 6-101(A) of the Code of Professional Responsibility; and
2. DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

And, for its SECOND AND FINAL CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

The Bar realleges paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 8 in the First Cause of Complaint as if set forth herein.

14.

In April 1989, the Accused advised Tune that the foreclosure would be complete by May 1, 1989.

15.

On May 26, 1989, the Accused advised Tune that a court appearance in the foreclosure action was scheduled for the following week and that a default judgment would be entered at that time.

16.

On August 14, 1989, the Accused advised Tune that a court appearance in the foreclosure action was scheduled for the following week and that a default judgment would be entered at that time.
17.

On or about December 21, 1989, the Accused instructed his secretary to advise Tune that the default order had been signed.

18.

The Accused’s representations to Tune as described in paragraphs 14 through 16 above were false. The representation the Accused instructed his secretary to make to Tune as described in paragraphs 17 above was false.

19.

By representing to Tune on several occasions that a court appearance was scheduled in the foreclosure action and that a default judgment would soon be taken, when he knew that the representations were not true, the Accused engaged in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation.

20.

By instructing his secretary to advise Tune that a default judgment had been entered in the foreclosure action when no such judgment had, in fact, been entered, the Accused violated the Code of Professional Responsibility through the acts of another.

21.

The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standards of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

2. DR 1-102(A)(3) of the Code of Professional Responsibility;

WHEREFORE, the Oregon State Bar demands that the Accused make answer to this complaint; that a hearing be set concerning the charges made herein; that the matters alleged herein be fully, properly and legally determined; and pursuant thereto, such action be taken as may be just and proper under the circumstances.

In Re:

Complaint as to the Conduct of DONALD K. ROBERTSON, Accused.

Case No. 90-5

Bar Counsel: Paul R. Duden, Esq.

Counsel for the Accused: Stephen R. Moore, Esq.

Trial Panel: Steven M. Rose, Chairperson; Anthony A. Buccino; Irwin J. Caplan (Public Member)

Disposition: Accused found not guilty of violation of DR 1-102(A)(3) and DR 7-102(A)(7). Dismissed.

Effective Date of Opinion: August 18, 1992
The Complaint in this case arises from Donald K. Robertson's (the "Accused") relationship primarily with Mark Walbridge, but also with his wife, Barbara Walbridge, and corporations in which she had an interest. The Complaint alleges that the Accused engaged in deceitful conduct, resulting in Don and Gloria Monroe accepting a disadvantageous settlement of a judgment owed to them by the Walbridges. The Complaint alleges that the Accused's conduct violates certain disciplinary rules.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Accused has been a member of the Oregon State Bar since 1958. In 1977, the Accused began representing Mark A. Walbridge, in relation to various business ventures. Prior to 1986, Mark Walbridge's business ventures were unsuccessful.

In 1985, Mark Walbridge began developing a VCR football game. Interactive VCR Games, Inc. ("Interactive"), an Oregon corporation, was also formed in 1985 to take responsibility for the development of marketing of this game. Barbara Walbridge has been a shareholder of Interactive since its inception.

The Accused did not represent Interactive in its incorporation and did not become corporate counsel of Interactive until 1988. He did represent Interactive on isolated matters prior to 1988.
The Accused knew that Barbara Walbridge was one of the shareholders of Interactive. The Accused also knew that Mark Walbridge was actively involved in the operation of Interactive, but owned no stock. The Accused, however, was not intimately aware of Mark Walbridge's conduct in the operation of Interactive. Prior to 1988, the Accused also was not intimately aware of Interactive's financial circumstances.

In 1986, Interactive first achieved some success, particularly in the sale of both intra-state and inter-state distributorships. In the fall of 1987, Interactive truly achieved success when it received $900,000 for its sale of its inventory of unsold games.

In October, 1986, Mark Walbridge contacted the Accused to negotiate a settlement with Don and Gloria Monroe. The Monroes had obtained a judgment against both Barbara and Mark Walbridge. At this time, with interest, the judgment was for an amount in excess of $100,000.

Thereafter, the Accused checked with the Walbridge's CPA, Marvin Neal, and obtained and reviewed a financial statement prepared by Neal for the Walbridges, dated November 30, 1985. The Accused also requested and obtained a current listing of assets and liabilities from Mark Walbridge. The Accused met with the Monroes and advised them to obtain independent counsel. The Monroes retained attorney Randall Grove, of Vancouver, Washington.

The Accused then entered into negotiations with Randall Grove. The Monroes agreed to accept payment of $30,000 from a third party named Conway. Prior to settling on this basis, Grove requested a written statement from Mark Walbridge that he had no liquid assets to satisfy the Monroes' judgment. Through the Accused, Mark Walbridge provided the following written statement:
"I have made the offer of settlement to you as communicated by my attorney in good faith and for the reason that I individually am presently unable to fully pay the obligation."

The Monroes satisfied the judgment both against Mark and Barbara Walbridge and accepted Conway's agreement to pay $30,000.

During the course of these negotiations, the Accused also provided legal representation with regard to the purchase of undeveloped real property on the Columbia River in Vancouver, Washington. The property was bought as the intended location of a residence for the Walbridges, although Mark Walbridge intended to operate Interactive from this new residence. On December 1, 1986, Barbara Walbridge signed an earnest money agreement for the purchase of that property in the name of Mark and Barbara Walbridge. The purchase price of the real property was for $375,000, with $225,000 to be paid at closing and the remaining $150,000 to be paid via a purchase money trust deed and note. Preliminary title reports were issued indicating a number of judgments against the Walbridges. On January 20, 1987, Barbara Walbridge contacted the Accused regarding the formation of a corporation, Case de Bendita, to become the purchaser of the real property. On January 21, 1987, the Accused formed Casa de Bendita, with Barbara Walbridge as the sole shareholder. The attorney for the seller of the property had agreed to allow Casa de Bendita to become the purchaser, as long as the Walbridges individually guaranteed the trust deed and note. The notes of the attorney for the seller indicate that "corporation will be dissolved after judgment liens satisfied of record."

On January 28, 1987, the Accused received a check in the amount of $225,000 from Interactive, signed by Mark Walbridge, and deposited it in his trust account. On January 30, 1987, Don Robertson issued a trust account check in the amount of $225,000 to purchase a cashier's check for the purchase of the Vancouver property by Casa de Bendita. This was the same day the Accused received Mark Walbridge's written statement claiming he was individually unable to pay the Monroe judgment.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

First Cause of Complaint.

In the First Cause of Complaint, the Accused is alleged to have violated DR 1-102(A)(3) and DR 7-102(A)(7) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, which respectively state:

"DR 1-102 Misconduct; Responsibility for Acts of Others.
(A) It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to: * * *
(3) Engage in conduct involving dishonesty fraud, deceit or misrepresentation; * * *

DR 7-102 Representing a Client Within the Bounds of the Law.
(A) In the lawyer's representation of a client or in representing the lawyer's own interests, a lawyer shall not: * * *
(7) Counsel or assist the lawyer's client in conduct that the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent. * * "

The gist of this cause is that the Accused formed Casa de Bendita to conceal the real property purchase from the Monroes, in violation of the above-quoted disciplinary rules. The Bar must prove this allegation by clear and convincing evidence.

The panel finds that the Bar has failed to meet its burden with regard to the first cause. The issue is, was the accused knowingly and actively involved in a scheme involving fraud, dishonesty, misrepresentation or illegality? The primary inquiry is what the Accused knew.

The Accused knew that the money for the purchase of the property came from Interactive, that Mark Walbridge was involved in the operation of Interactive and that Barbara Walbridge owned an unspecified number of shares of Interactive. There was little, if any, evidence that the Accused knew about the manner in which Mark Walbridge operated Interactive. Further, the evidence indicated that the Accused did not know the specific financial circumstances of Interactive. In spite of Interactive’s ability to purchase this land, there was not evidence that the Accused knew that Interactive was a profitable venture at the time of the purchase. The evidence also did not demonstrate that the Accused knew what, if any, sums Mark Walbridge or Barbara Walbridge were entitled to receive from Interactive at the time of the purchase.

The Accused knew of Mark Walbridge’s representation to the Monroes. There was no evidence, inferential or otherwise, that the Accused knew this statement was false. There was also no evidence that the Accused made any other misrepresentations regarding the Walbridge’s financial circumstances. The Accused did know that Mark Walbridge had substantial debts and/or judgments against him. He also knew that Barbara Walbridge was a co-debtor on a number of these debts and/or judgments. He did not know whether Mark Walbridge had the individual ability to pay the Monroe debt, even given the $225,000 payment by Interactive, and he had no obligation to make further inquiry into either of the Walbridge’s circumstances.

The Bar has urged that this case is extremely analogous to, if not controlled by, In re Hockett, 303 Or 150, 734 P2d 877 (1987). In In re Hockett, an attorney obtained two divorce decrees resulting in the transfer of the assets of a corporation and of its shareholders to those shareholders’ wives, in an attempt to avoid claims of judgment creditors of the corporation and those two shareholders. In re Hockett is instructive as it analyzes the Disciplinary Rules in question, particularly in discussing what constitutes fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, dishonesty and illegality.

The Supreme Court held that the terms "fraud" and "deceit" refer to fraud and deceit that are actionable in Oregon. The only possible actionable fraud was the Accused's transmission of Mark Walbridge's written statement. We find that there was inadequate evidence that the Accused knowingly engaged in fraud or deceit in the tortious sense.

The Court defined the term "misrepresentation" to include the "use of means which are not consistent with the truth." The Court found that the filing of an affidavit to obtain a divorce decree in less than 90 days to be misleading. We find that there was no evidence of misrepresentation in the case at bar.

Finally, the Supreme Court defined "dishonesty" and "illegal conduct" to include knowingly assisting a client in the fraudulent transfer of property. Whether the Accused did this presents the most difficult question in this case.

In analyzing the evidence, it is unclear whether a fraudulent conveyance occurred within the meaning of ORS 95.230 or prior law. The Monroes were not the creditors of Interactive, but of the Walbridges. The source of the money for the purchase of the property came from Interactive. Arguably, if Barbara Walbridge was entitled to some of those funds as a shareholder or Mark Walbridge was entitled to some of those funds because of his efforts on behalf of Interactive, there possibly may have been a fraudulent conveyance. The Bar, however, never established that. Moreso, there is no evidence that the Accused knew that the Walbridges were entitled to keep all or a portion of the funds advanced by Interactive. The evidence, therefore, is insufficient to find that the Accused engaged or assisted a client in dishonest or illegal conduct.
Second Cause of Complaint.

In the Second Cause of Complaint, the Bar alleges that the Accused violated the same disciplinary rules. The only difference in the allegations between the two causes is that, in the Second Cause, the Bar alleges the Accused had an obligation to disclose that he formed Casa de Bendita, with Barbara Walbridge as the sole shareholder to purchase the property. The Accused may have had that obligation if he had knowingly participated in an inappropriate scheme. We have already ruled that there was inadequate proof that he did.

ORDER

The trial panel finds that the Accused is not guilty of professional misconduct on both causes of complaint. The Bar’s Complaint is dismissed.

Disposition: Violation of DR 1-103(C). Disciplinary Board approval of stipulation. Public Reprimand.

Effective Date of Opinion: October 8, 1992
A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson of the Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to Bar Rule 3.6(e). The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve matters that are the subject of a disciplinary proceeding by the Bar against the Accused.

The Stipulation indicates that during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to a resolution of the proceedings and this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate the Accused at all times, was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon. He is a member of the Oregon State Bar having his current place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused, who was the subject of a disciplinary investigation, failed to respond to inquiries from authorities empowered to investigate the conduct of lawyers.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct in violation of DR 1-103(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

The Accused admits his violation of DR 1-103(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility as alleged in paragraphs 5, 7 and 8 of the Stipulation.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept the following designated form of discipline in exchange for the herein described stipulations:
The Accused agrees to a public reprimand for having violated ethical rules specified herein and described in the Stipulation entered into between the parties.

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has been admonished on two prior occasions for failing to respond to a bar inquiry and for his handling of a post-conviction matter.

The Regional Chairperson and State Chairperson, on behalf of the Disciplinary Board, approve the Stipulation and sanction.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be disciplined as set forth above for violation of DR 1-103(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of
MARTIN W. VANZEIPEL, Accused.

Case No. 91-107
STIPULATION FOR DISCIPLINE

Martin W. VanZeipel, attorney at law, (the Accused) and the Oregon State Bar (the Bar) hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

1. The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2. The Accused is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Multnomah, State of Oregon.

3. The Accused enters into this stipulation freely and voluntarily. This stipulation is made under the restrictions of Rule of Procedure 3.6(h).

4. At its meeting of May 30, 1992, the Bar’s State Professional Responsibility Board (SPRB) authorized formal disciplinary proceedings against the Accused in Case No. 91-107 alleging that the Accused violated DR 1-103(C).
In March 1991, the Bar received a complaint regarding the Accused's conduct. In forwarding a copy of that complaint to the Accused, the Bar requested a response from the Accused on or before April 15, 1991. No response was tendered nor did the Accused request an extension of time in which to file a response.

On May 22, 1991, Bar staff again requested a response from the Accused and notified him that a failure to respond would constitute a violation of DR 1-103(C) and would necessitate a referral to the LPRC. The Accused filed a timely response.

On June 20, 1991, Bar Counsel, having additional questions regarding the underlying matter, wrote the Accused and requested a response no later than July 5, 1991. No response was tendered, nor did the Accused seek an extension of time in which to file a response.

On July 18, 1991, Bar Counsel again wrote the Accused requesting a response to the June 20, 1991 letter. The Accused was again reminded that failing to respond to inquiries from Disciplinary Counsel might subject him to discipline for violating DR 1-103 and that a response was required no later than July 25, 1991. No response was tendered, nor was an extension of time sought in which to file a response. Therefore, on July 31, 1991, Bar staff referred the matter to the Multnomah County LPRC for an investigation. The LPRC concluded its investigation and the underlying complaint was ultimately dismissed by the SPRB.
The Accused admits that by failing to respond to Bar Counsel's letters referenced in paragraphs 5, 7 and 8 of this stipulation, he violated DR 1-103(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

Pursuant to the above admissions and BR 3.6(c)(iii), the Accused agrees to accept a public reprimand.

The Accused was admonished in 1984 for violating DR 6-101(B), DR 7-101(A)(2) and DR 2-110(A)(2) in conjunction with his handling of a post-conviction matter on behalf of a client. Additionally, in 1987, the Accused was admonished for violating DR 1-103(C), failing to respond to or cooperate with a Bar inquiry.

This stipulation is subject to review by the Bar's Disciplinary Counsel and to approval by the SPRB. If the SPRB approves the stipulation for discipline, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6.

DECISION AND ORDER

A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson of the Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to Bar Rule 3.6(e). The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve the matters set out in previously filed Complaints by the Bar against the Accused.

The Stipulation recites that during the pendency of all proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to a resolution of all proceedings and this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate the Accused at all times, was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon, and his current place of business is in the County of Tillamook, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused, in two instances, neglected a legal matter entrusted to him.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct in both instances that are in violation of DR 6-101(B), of the Code of Professional Responsibility, established by law and by the Oregon State Bar, as alleged in the Bar’s Complaints numbered 90-44 and 92-31.

The Accused admits his violation of DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility as alleged in the Bar’s Complaints numbered 90-44 and 92-31.
The Bar dismisses its remaining charges against the Accused, as alleged in Case No. 90-56.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept the following designated form of discipline in exchange for the herein described stipulations:

(1) The Accused agrees to a 30-day suspension for having violated the ethical rules specified herein and described in the Bar’s Amended Formal Complaints.

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has no prior record of reprimands, suspensions or disbarment.

The Regional Chairperson and State Chairperson, on behalf of the Disciplinary Board, approve the Stipulation and sanction.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be disciplined as set forth above for violation of DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, and that the period of suspension shall begin on December 1, 1992. The charges against the Accused in Case No. 90-56 are dismissed.

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of DONALD R. MOELLER, Accused.

Case Nos. 90-44; 90-56, 92-31
DISCIPLINE

Donald R. Moeller, attorney at law, (hereinafter "the Accused") and the Oregon State Bar (hereinafter "the Bar"), hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

1.

The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2.

The Accused, Donald R. Moeller, is, and at all times herein mentioned was, an attorney at law duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Tillamook, State of Oregon.

3.

The Accused enters into this Stipulation for Discipline freely and voluntarily. This stipulation is made under the restrictions of BR 3.6(h).

On July 21, 1990, the State Professional Responsibility Board (hereinafter, the Board) authorized a formal proceeding against the Accused in Case No. 90-44 alleging that he violated DR 6-101(B). On March 30, 1991, the Board authorized a formal proceeding against the Accused in Case No. 90-56, alleging that the Accused violated DR 1-103(C).

Pursuant to the Board's authorizations, a formal complaint was filed against the Accused on January 22, 1992, and served on February 19, 1992.

6.

On May 30, 1992, the Board authorized a formal proceeding against the Accused in Case No. 92-31, alleging that he violated DR 6-101(B). The Board authorized consolidation of Case No. 92-31 with Case Nos. 90-44 and 90-56. The formal complaint was thereupon amended and filed against the Accused on June 10, 1992.

7.

The amended formal complaint alleged with respect to Case No. 90-44 that the Accused neglected a legal matter entrusted to him when he failed to undertake certain actions in a conservatorship/guardianship action for a period of over a year, when he failed to respond to notices from the court to perform certain acts, when he failed to file a required bond, when he failed to advise his clients of the case's status and of the necessity for a bond, and when he allow a conservatorship/guardianship petition to be dismissed by the court.

The amended formal complaint alleged with respect to Case No. 90-56 that the Accused failed to cooperate with efforts by the Local Professional Responsibility Committee to investigate an ethical complaint brought against him.

The amended formal complaint alleged with respect to Case No. 92-31 that the Accused neglected a legal matter entrusted to him when he failed to prosecute
84 In re Moeller

a foreclosure matter on behalf of a client in a timely manner, engaging in several unjustifiable delays.

A copy of the Bar’s amended formal complaint is attached hereto as Exhibit
A and incorporated herein by reference.

The Accused admits with respect to Case No. 90-44 that he failed to respond to three letters from the court advising him of the necessity to file a visitor’s report. He further admits that he failed to advise his client of the status of the case or of the fact that a bond was necessary. The conservatorship/guardianship petition was ultimately dismissed by the court. The Accused denies that he was required to obtain a visitor’s report, obtain an order appointing a guardian, or file a bond for the conservator/guardian in the absence of funds from his client with which to do so. Nevertheless, the Accused admits that his conduct violated DR 6-101(B).

The Accused admits with respect to Case No. 92-31 that he failed to sign and return a stipulated judgment or negotiate a $500 settlement check sent to him by opposing counsel in a matter. Opposing counsel had to obtain a court order dismissing the litigation. The Accused further admits his conduct in this regard violated DR 6-101(B).

13.

The Bar, for purposes of this Stipulation only, dismisses the remaining charges against the Accused, including the DR 1-103(C) [noncooperation] charge alleged in Case No. 90-56.
14. The Accused explains the circumstances surrounding his violations of the foregoing standards of professional conduct in his Answer to the Amended Formal Complaint with attached exhibits, which is attached hereto as Exhibit B and incorporated herein by reference.

15. The Accused acknowledges that his explanation in no way justifies his conduct and is not a defense to the charges that he violated the ethical rules specified herein.

16. Pursuant to the admissions contained in paragraphs 11 and 12 supra, and BR 3.6(c)(iii), the Accused agrees to accept a 30-day suspension for his violations of DR 6-101(B). Said suspension would begin no earlier than December 1, 1992.

15.[17.] The Accused has no prior record of reprimands, suspension or disbarment.

16.[18.] This Stipulation for Discipline is subject to approval by the Board and review by the Disciplinary Board of the Oregon State Bar. If the Board approves this stipulation, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to BR 3.6(e).

For its FIRST CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

1. The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9, relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2. The Accused, Donald R. Moeller, is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Tillamook, State of Oregon.

3. On or about December 3, 1987, Jeannine R. Sieforth (hereinafter "Sieforth") retained the Accused for the purpose of establishing a guardianship and conservatorship for her mother.

4. On December 11, 1987, the Accused filed a petition for conservatorship/guardianship on behalf of Sieforth with the Oregon Circuit Court, Tillamook County. On June 6, 1989 the petition was dismissed by the court on its own motion.

The accused neglected a legal matter entrusted to him in one or more of the following particulars:

1. Failing to obtain and submit a visitor's report for over 14 months;
2. Failing to obtain an order appointing a guardian for over 14 months;
3. Failing to respond to three letters from the court advising of the necessity to file a visitor's report;
4. Failing to file a bond for the conservator/guardian;
5. Failing to advise Sieforth of the status of the case and that a bond was necessary; and
6. Allowing the conservatorship/guardianship petition to be dismissed by the court.

The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

Case No. 90-56

For its SECOND CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

7.

Incorporates by reference as though fully set forth herein, paragraphs 1 and 2 of its first cause of complaint.
8. On or about January 18, 1990, Assistant Disciplinary Counsel for the Oregon State Bar sent the Accused a copy of a complaint made against him by William B. Porter. The Accused responded on January 22, 1990, denying the allegations of the complaint. The complaint was subsequently referred to the Clatsop/Columbia/Tillamook County Local Professional Responsibility Committee (hereinafter "LPRC") for investigation.

9. On or about August 17, 1990, Timothy Dolan, LPRC investigator, sent a letter to the Accused requesting cancelled checks and other information. The Accused refused to supply the information.

10. On or about August 23, 1990, Blair J. Henningsgaard, LPRC chairman, spoke with the Accused by telephone to explain the need for the documents. Mr. Henningsgaard also requested the documents by letter dated August 23, 1990. The Accused failed to provide the requested documents.

11. On or about August 30, 1990, Mr. Henningsgaard again made written request for the documents. The Accused again failed to provide the documents.

12. On or about October 5, 1990, the Accused was served with a subpoena requiring the production of the requested documents at a scheduled meeting of the LPRC on October 16, 1990. The Accused thereupon requested that the LPRC cancel the hearing and release him from the subpoena on the condition that he voluntarily produce the requested documents. The Accused produced the requested documents on or about November 6, 1990.

By deliberately failing to cooperate with the LPRC, the Accused violated his duty to respond fully and truthfully to inquiries from and comply with reasonable requests of an authority empowered to investigate the conduct of lawyers.

14.

The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 1-103(C) of the Code of the Professional Responsibility.

Case No. 92-31

For its THIRD CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

15.

Incorporates by reference as though fully set forth herein, paragraphs 1 and 2 of its first cause of complaint.

16.

Sometime in 1988, the Accused undertook to represent the plaintiff in a case filed in Tillamook County, Reynolds v. Arndt, Polk Circuit No. 88P-1130, for foreclosure of a security interest in some personal property. The defendant in that case was represented by attorney Robert Custis.

17.

In August, 1989, the Accused suggested a stipulated judgment to resolve the pending Polk County civil case. Under the terms of the stipulation, the collateral would be returned. Custis agreed to the settlement and the Accused was to send Custis a stipulated judgment. He did not do so until April, 1990.
18.

Custis received the stipulated judgment, and forwarded it to his client, who lost it. Nothing further happened on the case until August, 1990 when the Accused checked on the status of the judgment. Custis told the Accused the collateral had been misidentified and partially liquidated. Custis asked the Accused to make changes in the stipulated judgment to reflect changes in the collateral. On or about October 24, 1990, Custis asked the Accused to pick up the collateral by a stated time. Arrangements were made for the Accused to pick up the collateral but an attempt by him to do so failed.

In January, 1991, Custis offered the Accused the option of resolving the case by one of three options: the Accused picking up the collateral, Custis's client (Arndt) storing the collateral, or Arndt paying $500 in full satisfaction. The Accused accepted the offer of $500 on behalf of his client on January 30, 1991.

20.

On or about February 15, 1991, Custis sent the Accused a stipulated judgment reflecting the settlement. On or about March 12, 1991, Custis sent the Accused a $500 check. Thereafter, despite repeated requests, the Accused failed to sign and return the stipulated judgment or negotiate the $500 check. Custis was eventually able to obtain a court order dismissing the litigation.

By the conduct alleged in paragraphs 17-20, supra, the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar.

1. DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

WHEREFORE, the Oregon State Bar demands that the Accused make answer to this Complaint; that a hearing be set concerning the charges made herein; that the matters alleged herein be fully, properly and legally determined; and pursuant thereto, such action be taken as may be just and proper under the circumstances.

Case No. 91-36
DECISION AND ORDER

A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson of the Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to Bar Rule 3.6(e). The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve the matters set out in a previously filed Complaint by the Bar against the Accused.

The Stipulation recites that during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to resolution of the proceedings and the Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate the Accused at all material times, was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon and was a member of the Oregon State Bar having his current place of business in the County of Benton, State of Oregon.

From a review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused engaged in conduct: (1) involving improperly withdrawing from representation of a client; (2) failing to respond to inquiry from Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Counsel.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct in violation of DR 1-103(C), DR 2-110(A)(1) and DR 2-110(B)(4) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.
The Accused admits his violation of DR 1-103(C), DR 2-110(A)(1) and DR 2-110(B)(4) of the Code of Professional Responsibility as alleged in the Formal Complaint and submits an explanation of his conduct by way of mitigation.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept the following designated form of discipline in exchange for the herein described stipulations:

(1) The Accused agrees to a public reprimand for having violated the ethical rules specified herein and described in the Formal Complaint.

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has no prior record of reprimands, suspensions or disbarment.

The Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson, on behalf of the Disciplinary Board, approve the Stipulation and sanction.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be disciplined as set forth above for violation of DR 1-103(C), DR 2-110(A)(1) and DR 2-110(B)(4) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

In re:

Complaint as to the Conduct of

Steven W. Black,

Accused.

Case No. 91-36

STIPULATION FOR DISCIPLINE

Steven W. Black, attorney at law, (the Accused) and the Oregon State Bar (the Bar) hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2.
The Accused is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Benton, State of Oregon.

3.
The Accused enters into this stipulation freely and voluntarily. This stipulation is made under the restrictions of Rule of Procedure 3.6(h).

4.
At its June 8, 1991 meeting, the State Professional Responsibility Board (SPRB) authorized formal disciplinary proceedings against the Accused alleging that he violated DR 1-103(C); DR 2-110(A)(1); DR 2-110(A)(2); DR 2-110(B)(4); and DR 6-101(B).
5.

A formal complaint was filed by the Oregon State Bar on May 4, 1992. The Accused filed his answer on July 1, 1992. Both the complaint and answer are attached hereto and incorporated by reference herein as Exhibits 1 and 2. Subsequent to the filing of the answer, the Accused and the Oregon State Bar entered into a discussion concerning the resolution of the Bar’s charges without a hearing.

6.

As a result of those discussions, the Accused hereby stipulates to violating DR 1-103(C); DR 2-110(A)(1) and DR 2-110(B)(4) as set forth in the Bar’s first, second and fourth causes of complaint.

7.

Regarding the first and second causes of complaint, the Accused acknowledges that while he ceased representing a client effective October 22, 1990, he failed to officially withdraw or comply with court rules regarding withdrawal in a timely fashion. In so doing, the Accused admits that he violated DR 2-110(A)(1) and DR 2-110(B)(4).

Regarding the fourth cause of complaint, the Accused, acknowledging that his explanation in no way justifies his conduct and is not a defense to the charge, explains the circumstances as follows: The Accused acknowledges that failing to respond to the inquiries of Disciplinary Counsel, which necessitated forwarding this matter to the LPRC for an investigation, constituted a violation of DR 1-103(C). During this period of time, the Accused was occupied dealing with the serious illness of his eldest daughter. In this regard, he was commuting on a regular basis between his Corvallis office and the Oregon Health Sciences Hospital in Portland. Once the Accused did respond to the LPRC, he did so, completely and thoroughly.

9. For purposes of this stipulation only, the Bar withdraws its allegations in the third cause of complaint that the Accused violated DR 2-110(A)(2) and DR 6-101(B).

10. The Accused has no prior record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment.

11. The Accused agrees to accept a public reprimand for his conduct.

12. This Stipulation has been freely and voluntarily made by the Accused, as evidenced by his verification below, with the knowledge and understanding that this stipulation is subject to review by the Bar’s Disciplinary Counsel, and to approval by the SPRB. If the SPRB approves this Stipulation for Discipline, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6.

OF THE STATE OF OREGON

In Re:

Complaint as to the Conduct of

STEVEN W. BLACK,

Case No. 91-36

FORMAL COMPLAINT

Accused.

For its FIRST CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

1.

The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS, Chapter 9, relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2.

The Accused, Steven W. Black, is, and at all times mentioned herein was, an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Benton County, State of Oregon.

3.

In or about June 1989 the Accused undertook to represent Daniel Weston Schoenthal (Schoenthal) on two felony theft charges pending in Marion County Circuit Court.

In or about the summer of 1990, Schoenthal and the Accused agreed that the Accused would no longer represent Schoenthal and would withdraw as attorney of record. Thereafter, the Accused agreed to appear on Schoenthal’s behalf at an October 22, 1990 status conference regarding the criminal matters. Subsequent to the October 22, 1990 appearance, the Accused took no further action on Schoenthal’s legal matter.

On numerous occasions between October, 1990 and March, 1991, Marion County Court personnel advised the Accused that court permission was required to render effective any withdrawal as Schoenthal’s counsel. Not until March 18, 1991, did the Accused seek court permission to withdraw.

6.

By withdrawing from employment prior to securing permission from the Marion County Circuit Court, the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 2-110(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

AND, for its SECOND CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

Incorporates by reference as fully set forth herein, paragraphs 1 through 5 of its First Cause of Complaint.

8.

By failing to secure court permission to withdraw for several months after he was discharged by his client, the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 2-110(B)(4) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.
AND, for its THIRD CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

Incorporates by reference as fully set forth herein, paragraphs 1 through 5 of its First Cause of Complaint.

10.
During the October 22, 1990 status conference referenced in Paragraph 4, the court informed the Accused that an additional status conference would be held December 12, 1990. The court confirmed this conference date by written notice to the Accused.

11.
The Accused, while attorney of record, neither called nor sent Schoenthal notice of the December 12, 1990 conference date. Neither the Accused nor Schoenthal appeared at the December 12, 1990 conference. As a result, on December 13, 1990, a warrant was issued for Schoenthal’s arrest. On that date, court personnel contacted the Accused and informed him of the warrant’s issuance.

12.
The Accused, while attorney of record, failed to take any action to have the warrant rescinded and failed to notify Schoenthal of its issuance until January 26, 1991.

From November 1, 1990 until January 26, 1991, Schoenthal wrote several letters to the court and the district attorney regarding his legal matter. As the Accused was attorney of record, those letters were forwarded to him for a response. The Accused failed to respond to Schoenthal’s requests for information regarding the status of his case.
By failing to notify Schoenthal of the December status conference and/or failing to appear at that conference, failing to notify Schoenthal of the issuance of the warrant and/or failing to take any steps to get the warrant rescinded, failing to respond to Schoenthal’s inquiries which were being forwarded to the Accused from the court and failing to seek the court’s permission to withdraw until several months after the Accused had been discharged and ceased to perform any legal work on behalf of Schoenthal, the Accused violated the following standards of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 2-110(A)(2) of the Code of Professional Responsibility; and

2. DR 6-101(B) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

AND, for its FOURTH AND FINAL CAUSE OF COMPLAINT against the Accused, the Oregon State Bar alleges:

15. Incorporates by reference as fully set forth herein, paragraphs 1 through 3 of its First Cause of Complaint.

16. On or about January 28, 1991, the Oregon State Bar received a complaint against the Accused submitted by Schoenthal.

17. The Oregon State Bar corresponded with the Accused on January 29, 1991, requesting a response from the Accused on or before February 19, 1991. No response was made by the Accused on or before February 19, 1991.
18. The Oregon State Bar again corresponded with the Accused on or about March 1, 1991, requesting a response on or before March 8, 1991. No response was made by the Accused by March 8, 1991.

19. Schoenthal’s complaint was referred to the Benton/Linn/Polk County Local Professional Responsibility Committee (LPRC) for investigation on or about March 12, 1991, with notice to the Accused. The Accused submitted a written response to the Oregon State Bar regarding Schoenthal’s complaint on or about May 14, 1991.

20. The Accused asserted no right or privilege in explanation of his failure to respond timely to the inquiries of the Oregon State Bar.

21. The aforesaid conduct of the Accused violated the following standard of professional conduct established by law and by the Oregon State Bar:

1. DR 1-103(C) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

WHEREFORE, the Oregon State Bar demands that the Accused make answer to this complaint; that a hearing be set concerning the charges made herein; that the matters alleged herein be fully, properly and legally determined; and pursuant thereto, such action be taken as may be just and proper under the circumstances.

In Re:

Willard K. Carey,

Case No. 91-122
DECISION AND ORDER

A Stipulation for Discipline has been presented to the Regional Chairperson and the State Chairperson of the Disciplinary Board for review pursuant to Bar Rule 3.6(3)[sic]. The Stipulation is intended by the Accused and the Bar to resolve the matters resulting from a previously filed Complaint against the Accused.

On 12/7/91, the Bar’s State Professional Responsibility Board authorized the filing of a formal complaint against the Accused and the Stipulation is in lieu of such Complaint.

The Stipulation recites that during the pendency of the proceedings, the Bar and the Accused voluntarily agreed to resolution of the proceedings and this Stipulation is a product of those negotiations.

The material allegations of the Stipulation indicate the Accused at all material times, was admitted by the Oregon Supreme Court to practice law in Oregon. He was a member of the Oregon State Bar having his current place of business in the County of Union, State of Oregon.

From review of the Stipulation, it appears that the Accused engaged in conduct involving a conflict of interest and communication with a represented party.

The conduct of the Accused described in the Stipulation constitutes conduct in violation of DR 5-105(E) of the Code of Professional Responsibility and DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility, established by law and by the Oregon State Bar.
The Accused stipulated to the violations of DR 5-105(E) and DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility. The stipulation sets forth facts in mitigation of both violations.

The Bar withdraws a charge that the Accused violated DR 2-110(B)(2) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

Pursuant to the Stipulation, the Accused agrees to accept the following designated form of discipline in exchange for the herein described stipulations:

The Accused agrees to a public reprimand for having violated the ethical rules specified herein.

From the Stipulation it appears that the Accused has been previously reprimanded by the Oregon Supreme Court.

The Regional Chairperson and State Chairperson, on behalf of the Disciplinary Board, approve the Stipulation and sanction.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Accused be disciplined as set forth above for violation of DR 5-105(E) and DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

DATED this 21st day of December, 1992.

In Re:
Complaint as to the Conduct of
WILLARD K. CAREY,
Accused.

Case No. 91-122
STIPULATION FOR DISCIPLINE

Willard K. Carey, attorney at law, (Carey) and the Oregon State Bar (the Bar) hereby stipulate to the following matters pursuant to Rule of Procedure 3.6(c).

The Oregon State Bar was created and exists by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon and is, and at all times mentioned herein was, authorized to carry out the provisions of ORS Chapter 9 relating to the discipline of attorneys.

2.

Carey is, and at all times mentioned herein, was an attorney at law, duly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to practice law in this state and a member of the Oregon State Bar, having his office and place of business in the County of Union, State of Oregon.

3.

Carey enters into this stipulation freely and voluntarily. This stipulation is made under the restrictions set forth in Rule of Procedure 3.6(h).

At its meeting of December 7, 1991, the Bar’s State Professional Responsibility Board (hereinafter "SPRB") authorized the filing of a formal complaint against Carey alleging violations of DR 5-105(E), DR 7-104(A)(1) and DR 2-110(B)(2) of the Code of Professional Responsibility. In lieu of such a complaint, the parties propose to resolve the matter with this stipulation.

In May 1990, Carey was consulted by his long-time client, Jack Keller (hereinafter "Keller") to prepare a sales contract in which Keller was to sell a restaurant to Alvin Grace (hereinafter "Grace"). Carey drafted such a contract on behalf of Keller. Pursuant to the terms of an earnest money agreement, Grace paid into escrow $10,000 toward the restaurant purchase.

6.

Thereafter, also in May 1990, Grace and his wife (hereinafter "Mrs. Grace") consulted Carey's law partner, Phillip Mendiguren (hereinafter "Mendiguren") for the purpose of forming a corporation to operate the restaurant once purchased from Keller.

7.

On June 10, 1990, prior to the contract for the restaurant sale being signed by the parties, Grace was killed in an airplane accident. Mrs. Grace then consulted Carey's law partner, Mendiguren, and a probate of Grace's estate was initiated with Mrs. Grace as personal representative and Carey's law partner as attorney for the personal representative. In light of her husband's death, Mrs. Grace did not intend to go forward with the purchase of the restaurant. Due to his absence at a law partnership meeting Carey did not learn that his partner undertook to represent the Graces initially or Mrs. Grace after her husband's death.

On August 1, 1990, the title company handling the sale of the restaurant corresponded with Keller and Mrs. Grace regarding the disposition of the $10,000 earnest money still held in trust by the title company. Copies of this letter were sent both to Carey, attorney for Keller, and to Mendiguren, as attorney for the Grace estate. Carey did not take notice of the reference to his law partner in the letter. Any refund of the $10,000 earnest money would have been an asset of the probate estate.

On August 24, 1990, still unaware that Mendiguren was representing the Grace estate, Carey corresponded directly with Mrs. Grace, without Mendiguren’s knowledge or consent, on the subject of the $10,000 earnest money, proposing that $5,000 be retained by Keller as liquidated damages and that $5,000 be refunded. No copy of Carey’s letter was sent to Mendiguren.

10.
Upon obtaining actual knowledge of the conflict of interest, Carey withdrew from representing Keller on or about September 10, 1990.

11.
By representing Keller in the sale of the restaurant when his law partner subsequently accepted the representation of initially the Graces and then Mrs. Grace after her husband’s death, and particularly in light of the issue of entitlement to the $10,000 earnest money, Carey violated DR 5-105(E) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

12.
In mitigation, Carey’s violation of DR 5-105(E) was not intentional. Carey did not have actual knowledge that his law partner Mendiguren began to represent the Graces in May 1990 in a matter which gave rise to a conflict of interest with Carey’s long-time client, Keller. Carey did not actually know of his partner’s representation of the Graces until September 1990, at which time he immediately withdrew from representing Keller. However, Carey stipulates that, pursuant to DR
5-105(B)(sic), by the exercise of reasonable care he should have known of the conflict of interest earlier.

By communicating directly with Mrs. Grace on a subject upon which she was represented by a lawyer, Carey violated DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

14.

In mitigation, Carey’s violation of DR 7-104(A)(1) was not intentional. At the time he corresponded directly with Mrs. Grace, he did not realize that his law partner represented Mrs. Grace with respect to the Grace estate. However, Carey stipulates that under Oregon case law DR 7-104(A)(1) can be violated whether the direct communication with a represented party is intentional or negligent.

OTHER CHARGE

Pursuant to the terms of this stipulation and BR 3.6(c)(iii), Carey agrees to accept a public reprimand for a violation of the disciplinary rules cited herein.

Carey has previously been reprimanded by the Oregon Supreme Court in In re Carey, 307 Or 315, 767 P2d 438 (1989). Carey has no other record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment since his admission to practice law in 1956.
18. Since the events described in this Stipulation, and recognizing that reliance upon oral communications among firm members as a means of checking for conflicts of interest may often be inadequate, Carey and his law firm have instituted procedures which have been reviewed and approved by Disciplinary Counsel of the Oregon State Bar whereby written notice of the names of all new firm clients are regularly circulated among members of the firm for the express purpose of detecting at the earliest possible time a potential conflict of interest between firm clients.

19. This stipulation is subject to review by the Bar’s Disciplinary Counsel and to approval by the SPRB. If the SPRB approves the stipulation for discipline, the parties agree that it will be submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration pursuant to the terms of BR 3.6

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON

Accused.
(OSB 88-49; SC S38205)

In Banc

On review of the decision of the Disciplinary Board Trial Panel of the Oregon State Bar.

James G. Rice, Portland, argued the cause for the accused. With him on the briefs was Mark A. Gordon, Portland.

James H. Clarke, Portland, argued the cause and filed the brief for the Oregon State Bar.

PER CURIAM

The accused is suspended from the practice of law for a period of 18 months, effective on issuance of the appellate judgment. The Oregon State Bar is awarded its actual and necessary costs and disbursements. ORS 9.536(4).
PER CURIAM

This is a lawyer disciplinary proceeding. The Oregon State Bar charges that the accused engaged in criminal conduct that reflected adversely on his fitness to practice law, in violation of DR 1-102(A)(2), and that he continued professional employment even though his exercise of professional judgment reasonably could have been affected by his personal interests, in violation of former DR 5-101(A).

The trial panel found the accused guilty of violating DR 1-102(A)(2) and former DR 5-101(A) and ordered that he be suspended from the practice of law for three years, with the suspension stayed after one year if certain probationary terms are satisfied. The accused seeks review. We review the record de novo. ORS 9.536(3); BR 10.6. The Bar has the burden of establishing ethical misconduct by clear and convincing evidence. BR 5.2.

We find the accused guilty of violating DR 1-102(A)(2) and former DR 5-101(A). We suspend him from the practice of law for 18 months.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Many of the essential facts are undisputed and may be summarized briefly.

The accused was admitted to practice law in Oregon in 1977. At the time of the hearing, he handled personal injury cases and criminal defense. Criminal defense had been a significant part of his practice for about ten years. Previously, he had served as a deputy district attorney for almost two years. The accused was born in 1949 and was married at the time of the events in question.

1 DR 1-102(A)(2) provides:
   "It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:
   "* * * *
   "(2) Commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness to practice law[.]"

2 At the time of the events in question, former DR 5-101(A) provided in part:
   "Except with the consent of the lawyer's client after full disclosure, a lawyer shall not accept employment if the exercise of the lawyer's professional judgment on behalf of the lawyer's client will be or reasonably may be affected by the lawyer's own financial, business, property, or personal interests."
In late 1987, the accused undertook to represent a teenage girl and her parents in a personal injury action, arising from an automobile accident in which the girl suffered injuries. The injuries included a closed head injury, injuries to the pelvis, and permanent facial scarring. The girl was in a coma for several days, suffered from short-term loss of memory, and had to undergo rehabilitation therapy. The girl turned 16 years old in October 1987.

On the girl’s behalf, the accused settled the personal injury case for $200,000. On April 29, 1988, a limousine was rented for the girl so that she could celebrate the settlement by spending the day in Portland. That afternoon, at the girl’s urging, the accused served her wine and engaged in sexual intercourse with her in the back seat of the limousine. He knew that the girl was 16 years old and that it is a crime to give alcohol to a person who is under 21.

A grand jury indicted the accused for contributing to the sexual delinquency of a minor, sexual abuse in the third degree, and furnishing alcohol to a minor. The circuit court rejected a civil compromise proposed jointly by the accused and by the girl and her parents. The accused entered into a one-year diversion program, which he completed successfully, and the criminal charges were dismissed.

Initially the parents were upset and angry at the accused. The accused admitted at the hearing that he knew

3 ORS 163.435(1)(a) provides:

“A person 18 years of age or older commits the crime of contributing to the sexual delinquency of a minor if:

“(a) Being a male, he engages in sexual intercourse with a female under 18 years of age."

4 ORS 163.415(1)(b) provides:

“A person commits the crime of sexual abuse in the third degree if the person subjects another person to sexual contact; and

“* * * * *"

“(b) The victim is incapable of consent by reason of being under 18 years of age, mentally defective, mentally incapacitated or physically helpless.”

5 ORS 471.410(2) provides:

“No one other than the person’s parent or guardian shall sell, give or otherwise make available any alcoholic liquor to a person under the age of 21 years. A person violates this subsection who sells, gives or otherwise makes available alcoholic liquor to a person with the knowledge that the person to whom the liquor is made available will violate this subsection.”
that the parents would not approve of his having sexual relations with the girl and that if he had realized that they would find out, "that would have stopped me."

Additional facts, some of which are disputed, will be discussed as appropriate below.

The accused's conduct violated three criminal statutes: sexual abuse in the third degree, contributing to the sexual delinquency of a minor, and giving alcohol to a minor. In In re White, 311 Or 573, 589, 815 P2d 1257 (1991), this court held:

"Each case must be decided on its own facts. [In order for a criminal act to serve as a predicate to disciplinary action,] there must be some rational connection other than the criminality of the act between the conduct and the actor's fitness to practice law. Pertinent considerations include the lawyer's mental state; the extent to which the act demonstrates disrespect for the law or law enforcement; the presence or absence of a victim; the extent of actual or potential injury to a victim; and the presence or absence of a pattern of criminal conduct."

We begin by considering the lawyer's mental state and the extent to which the acts demonstrate disrespect for the law or law enforcement. The accused acted intentionally and for personal gratification. He also knew that he was violating the law.

The next factor to be considered is the extent of actual or potential injury to a victim. The accused testified, and argues before us, that the girl suffered no actual harm. He does not, and could not reasonably, argue that the criminal acts that he committed did not carry with them substantial potential injury to a victim. We find, by clear and convincing evidence, that the accused caused actual harm, including psychological harm, to the girl and to her parents. For example, the girl's pastor testified that she wrote a note after the incident, blaming herself for the accused's difficulties and contemplating suicide, and the girl's mother testified that the girl "was taking things, I think, very, very hard" in the aftermath of the incident. The mother also testified that the situation was very painful for the rest of the family.
that the parents would not approve of his having sexual relations with the girl and that if he had realized that they would find out, "that would have stopped me."

Additional facts, some of which are disputed, will be discussed as appropriate below.

The accused's conduct violated three criminal statutes: sexual abuse in the third degree, contributing to the sexual delinquency of a minor, and giving alcohol to a minor. In In re White, 311 Or 573, 589, 815 P2d 1257 (1991), this court held:

"Each case must be decided on its own facts. [In order for a criminal act to serve as a predicate to disciplinary action, there must be some rational connection other than the criminality of the act between the conduct and the actor's fitness to practice law. Pertinent considerations include the lawyer's mental state; the extent to which the act demonstrates disrespect for the law or law enforcement; the presence or absence of a victim; the extent of actual or potential injury to a victim; and the presence or absence of a pattern of criminal conduct."

We begin by considering the lawyer's mental state and the extent to which the acts demonstrate disrespect for the law or law enforcement. The accused acted intentionally and for personal gratification. He also knew that he was violating the law.

The next factor to be considered is the extent of actual or potential injury to a victim. The accused testified, and argues before us, that the girl suffered no actual harm. He does not, and could not reasonably, argue that the criminal acts that he committed did not carry with them substantial potential injury to a victim. We find, by clear and convincing evidence, that the accused caused actual harm, including psychological harm, to the girl and to her parents. For example, the girl's pastor testified that she wrote a note after the incident, blaming herself for the accused's difficulties and contemplating suicide, and the girl's mother testified that the girl "was taking things, I think, very, very hard" in the aftermath of the incident. The mother also testified that the situation was very painful for the rest of the family.
Finally, this record does not establish a pattern of criminal conduct by the accused.

From a review of all the facts, we conclude that there is a rational relationship between the accused's criminal conduct and his fitness to practice law. The accused's crimes involved a girl who was the beneficiary of his professional efforts. Moreover, the accused testified that he thought that the girl understood him to be her lawyer. See In re Weidner, 310 Or 757, 770, 801 P2d 828 (1990) (lawyer-client relationship may be based on reasonable expectation of putative client).

The accused's crimes had as their victim a person whose interests he was representing and a person whom the law deems incapable of making certain important decisions, such as the decision to consent to sexual intercourse and the decision to prosecute or settle a tort claim. Such conduct shows disrespect for the law, which the lawyer has sworn to support, ORS 9.250, and bears on the trustworthiness of a lawyer who is retained to assist a vulnerable person. See In re Howard, 297 Or 174, 681 P2d 775 (1984) (conviction for prostitution supported a stipulation for lawyer discipline, because crime was a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude); In re Bevans, 294 Or 248, 655 P2d 573 (1982) (lawyer who was convicted of sexual abuse in the second degree committed a misdemeanor that involved moral turpitude and was suspended summarily; reinstatement allowed on proof of rehabilitation). Courts in other states have held that similar offenses reflect adversely on fitness to practice law. See Com. on Pro. Ethics & Conduct v. Hill, 436 NW2d 57 (Iowa Sup Ct 1989) (lawyer sanctioned for accepting sex from client in lieu of a fee); Matter of Herman, 108 NJ 66, 527 A2d 868 (1987) (lawyer suspended on grounds of moral turpitude for making unlawful sexual advances to child, unrelated to practice of law); Office of Disciplinary Counsel v. King, 37 Ohio St 3d 77, 523 NE2d 857 (1988) (consensual sex with 15-year-old non-client reflected adversely on fitness to practice law).

The accused's criminal acts reflect adversely on his fitness to practice law; he violated DR 1-102(A)(2).
FORMER DR 5-101(A)

Former DR 5-101(A) prohibited a lawyer from accepting employment if the exercise of professional judgment on the client's behalf would be or reasonably could be affected by the lawyer's personal interests, unless the lawyer obtained informed consent. That disciplinary rule also included continued, as well as initial acceptance of, employment. In re Moore, 299 Or 496, 507, 703 P2d 961 (1985).

The accused argues that his employment by the girl's parents was, for all practical purposes, at an end when the crimes occurred. We disagree. The accused's employment as a lawyer was not at an end, even though a settlement had been reached. The proceeds of the settlement had not been distributed, and the record shows that the accused ultimately transferred the file to another lawyer, who received a fee for finishing work on the case. Thus, the accused's employment was continuing.

The accused also had a personal interest. He testified that, before the settlement had been approved by the court, he realized that he had developed a strong sexual interest in the girl, and she in him.

Although the record does not disclose an actual compromise of the accused's professional judgment in the conduct of the personal injury action, the exercise of his professional judgment on his clients' behalf reasonably might have been affected by his personal interest. From his testimony, the accused appears to have recognized that possibility.

Finally, the girl's consent to the acts does not amount to informed consent to the accused's continuing representation.

We conclude that the accused's acts violated former DR 5-101(A).

6 DR 5-101(A) has been amended. Effective January 2, 1991, it expressly states that a lawyer "shall not accept or continue employment" in the described circumstances. (Emphasis added.)
SANCTION

In deciding on the appropriate sanction, this court refers for assistance to the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions (ABA Standards). In re White, supra, 311 Or at 591. ABA Standard 3.0 sets out the factors to consider: the duty violated, the lawyer's mental state, the potential or actual injury caused by the misconduct, and the existence of aggravating or mitigating factors.

The accused breached his duty to the minor whose interests he was representing, and to her parents, when he took advantage of their professional relationship for personal gratification. He breached his duty to the legal system by violating criminal laws. He breached his duty to the public by undermining confidence in members of the legal profession to fulfill professional obligations properly toward vulnerable persons.

As noted above, the accused acted intentionally, with knowledge that he was violating the criminal law, and for personal gratification.

We also have found that the girl and her parents suffered actual harm from the accused's acts. Those acts carried the potential for even greater harm.

The pertinent ABA Standards suggest that suspension is the appropriate sanction in this kind of situation. See ABA Standard 4.32 (conflict of interest between lawyer and client); ABA Standard 5.12 (criminal conduct that seriously adversely reflects on lawyer's fitness to practice). In considering the length of suspension, we next consider pertinent aggravating and mitigating factors.

There are several aggravating factors. First, the accused acted from a selfish motive, ABA Standard 9.22(b), in this instance, the motive of sexual gratification. Second, his conduct involved a victim who was vulnerable. ABA Standard 9.22(h). Third, he had substantial experience in the practice of law at the time of the events in question. ABA Standard 9.22(i). Fourth, the accused committed multiple offenses, ABA Standard 9.22(d), although they all arose out of the same incident.
A fifth aggravating factor is lack of candor during the disciplinary process. ABA Standard 9.22(f). The accused testified that he thought that the age of consent for sexual intercourse was 16 rather than 18. We disbelieve that testimony, for two reasons. First, the accused acknowledged that he knew the age of consent in Oklahoma and Michigan, where he was reared, even before he became a lawyer. Second, the accused is an experienced criminal defense lawyer and former prosecutor in Oregon and has handled cases involving sexual crimes.

A sixth aggravating factor, refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of the conduct, ABA Standard 9.22(g), requires some discussion. The tenor of the accused's testimony was that he was the victim of a vindictive district attorney and Bar. He testified, for example, that he should not have been prosecuted for crimes, because the family did not want him to be, and that he should not have been disciplined by the Bar: "I think the State Bar should have shown more sensitivity." The accused testified that he did not believe that his conduct was unethical or that it injured the girl, because she was mature and sexually experienced and because she seduced him. The accused's testimony reveals that his most central thoughts were for himself, both at the time of the incident and afterward. With respect to his mental state at the time of the incident, he testified:

"Q. Did you think it could have hurt her parents?

"A. I don't think it crossed my mind.

"Q. Did you think it could hurt her?

"A. Did I think it could hurt her? No.

"Q. Did you think it could hurt you?

"A. I think that may have crossed my mind, but I don't know if I thought about it."

The accused further testified that he went to a bar immediately after the incident:

"Q.  [Y]ou walked into [the bar]. You walked in with a smile on your face and bragged about having sex in the back of a limousine?

" ***
“A. I don't know about bragged. I told [a friend] what had occurred. I was quite frankly in a fairly good mood about it. I had made the largest fee of my professional career and I'd had sex in the back of a limo with somebody who I liked and found very sensual. So I was not sad. So maybe brag is correct.”

Although the accused paid lip service to feeling remorse later, his testimony demonstrates to us that he regrets the consequences of his conduct primarily because of their impact on him, his own family, and their interests.

In short, the accused still does not recognize fully the impact of his misconduct on his clients, the public, and the legal system. We note that, under the ABA Standards, the failure of an injured client to complain, or the claim of a lawyer that the client induced the wrongful conduct, is not mitigating. ABA Standard 9.4(b) & (f) and Commentary.

There also are, however, some mitigating factors. First, the accused has received no prior formal discipline. ABA Standard 9.32(a). Second, there was some delay in completing the disciplinary proceedings. ABA Standard 9.32(i). Third, the accused attempted to rectify the consequences of his misconduct, ABA Standard 9.32(d), by obtaining substitute counsel for the family and by fully informing his existing and potential clients of the pending charges. Fourth, the accused undertook rehabilitation efforts in the interim. ABA Standard 9.32(j).

The trial panel imposed a three-year suspension, but concluded that the last two years should be stayed if certain probationary terms (requiring therapy and drug counseling) were met. The accused, the Bar, and we agree that the record does not support those probationary terms. See In re Haws, 310 Or 741, 752, 801 P2d 818 (1990) (conditions of probation must relate to the charges).

Before this court, the Bar calls for a three-year suspension, without probation or stay, relying on assertedly similar cases from other jurisdictions. See People v. Greenemyer, 745 P2d 1027 (Colo 1987) (lawyer convicted of sexual assault of a minor was disbarred); Matter of Wells, 572 NE2d 1290 (Ind 1991) (three-year suspension for unsolicited touching of young men during course of professional relationship);
Matter of Christie, 574 A2d 845 (Del Sup Ct 1990) (three-year suspension for misconduct involving alcohol and masturbation with teenage non-clients); Matter of Disciplinary Proceedings Against Woodmansee, 147 Wis 2d 837, 434 NW2d 94 (1989) (three-year suspension for fourth degree sexual assault on client). The accused argues that a reprimand is the appropriate sanction.

The accused, in his testimony, revealed an astonishing lack of appreciation for the nature and extent of his professional obligations and for the potential and actual harm to his clients from his conduct. His principal focus has been on himself, his family, and their social and financial interests. Nonetheless, egocentrism is not a violation of the disciplinary rules, and the aggravating factors are counterbalanced to some extent by the mitigating factors.

We conclude that an 18-month suspension, without probation or stay, is the appropriate sanction in this case.

The accused is suspended from the practice of law for a period of 18 months, effective on issuance of the appellate judgment. The Oregon State Bar is awarded its actual and necessary costs and disbursements. ORS 9.536(4).
IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON

Robert L. KIRKMAN,
Accused.
(OSB 90-81; SC S38143)

On review of the recommendation of the Trial Panel of the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board.

Garr M. King, of Kennedy, King & Zimmer, Portland, argued the cause and filed the briefs for the accused.

Mary A. Cooper, Assistant Disciplinary Counsel, argued the cause and filed the brief for the Oregon State Bar.

Before Carson, Chief Justice, and Peterson, Gillette, Fadely, Unis, and Graber, Justices.

PER CURIAM

The accused is disbarred.
PER CURIAM

This is a lawyer disciplinary proceeding involving Robert L. Kirkman (the accused). The Disciplinary Board Trial Panel recommended that the accused be disbarred. Based on our findings on de novo review, we order that the accused be disbarred.

The accused was admitted to practice law in Oregon in 1968. After meritorious service in the armed forces, the accused entered the private practice of law in Portland in 1972. He had a good reputation as a lawyer.

The accused married Susan Kirkman in 1967. They had four children. During the marriage, the accused became intimately involved with another woman, Jane. A daughter was born to the accused and Jane on January 19, 1984.

Jane exerted pressure on the accused to get a divorce so that he could marry her. In about November 1984, the accused prepared and presented to Jane a judgment of dissolution purportedly from a Clackamas County Circuit Court case entitled "In the Matter of the Marriage of Robert L. Kirkman, petitioner, and Susan C. Kirkman, respondent, case number 83-2-307." The accused signed or caused another to sign Judge Dale Jacobs' name to the purported dissolution judgment. The accused represented to Jane that this judgment was a final dissolution of his marriage to Susan Kirkman. He knew that the judgment was not valid. He knew that no such judgment had been entered in any court. The accused delivered the dissolution judgment to Jane with the intent to deceive her so that he could continue his relationship with her.

The accused was appointed a Multnomah County District Judge in December 1984.

In March 1987, while still married to Susan Kirkman, the accused applied for a license to marry Jane. On the application, the accused declared that he was divorced. On April 4, 1987, while he was still married to Susan Kirkman, the accused married Jane in a civil ceremony. He told Jane, both before and after the April 4, 1987, ceremony, that he was divorced from Susan Kirkman. Jane later learned that the accused was not divorced from Susan Kirkman. Thereafter, the accused and Jane, as co-petitioners, filed a suit to annul their marriage. That marriage was annulled in the fall of 1987.

The marriage between the accused and Susan Kirkman was dissolved in December 1987. In January 1988, the accused and Jane were married. That marriage was dissolved on July 23, 1990.

A complaint was filed with the Commission on Judicial Fitness and Disability. On October 22, 1990, following a hearing, that Commission recommended to the Supreme Court that the accused be removed from office as a district court judge. ORS 1.425. While the judicial fitness proceeding was pending in the Supreme Court, the accused resigned as district court judge, effective January 31, 1991.

DR 1-102(A)(3) provides:

These criminal acts reflect adversely on the accused’s honesty, trustworthiness, and fitness to practice law. DR 1-102(A)(2). These were not “victimless” crimes. The accused’s duplicity existed over a period of years, causing injury and humiliation to both of his families. The publicity surrounding these criminal acts was extensive. We also find that his misconduct caused serious injury to the legal system. His conduct brought contempt upon the legal profession and upon the courts, undermining public confidence in bench and bar alike.5

We turn to the question of sanction. In other cases, we have relied on the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions. See, e.g., In re Wolf, 312 Or 655, 662, 826 P2d 628 (1992); In re Hedrick, 312 Or 442, 449, 822 P2d 1187 (1991). We do so in this case, as well. ABA Standard 5.11 provides:

"Disbarment is generally appropriate when:

(a) a lawyer engages in serious criminal conduct, a necessary element of which includes intentional interference with the administration of justice, false swearing, misrepresentation, fraud, extortion, misappropriation, or theft * * *, or

(b) a lawyer engages in any other intentional conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation that seriously adversely reflects on the lawyer’s fitness to practice.”

Personal honesty and integrity are essential characteristics of lawyers. Intentional misrepresentation is totally incompatible with a lawyer’s obligations. Adherence to the law is a lawyer’s sworn duty. Concerning the criminal misconduct, whether or not a charge is brought largely is irrelevant. The accused is guilty of serious criminal misconduct, viz., one felony and two misdemeanors, as well as misconduct involving misrepresentation that “seriously adversely reflects on [his] fitness to practice” law. The misconduct of which we have found the accused guilty is so serious that, in the absence of compelling mitigating circumstances, disbarment is the only appropriate sanction.

ABA Standard 9.32 lists mitigating factors.

"Mitigating factors include:

5 By way of mitigation, the accused’s brief states that "he has had to sustain himself through the humiliating media coverage and has made substantial efforts to protect his family from publicity. The media coverage has made the public and the Bar well aware of [the accused’s] problems and the adverse effect on him will continue for some time."
“(a) absence of a prior disciplinary record;
“(b) absence of a dishonest or selfish motive;
“(c) personal or emotional problems;
“(d) timely good faith effort to make restitution or to rectify consequences of misconduct;
“(e) full and free disclosure to disciplinary board or cooperative attitude toward proceedings;
“(f) inexperience in the practice of law;
“(g) character or reputation;
“(h) physical or mental disability or impairment;
“(i) delay in disciplinary proceedings;
“(j) interim rehabilitation;
“(k) imposition of other penalties or sanctions;

The record establishes some of the mitigating factors. The accused has no prior disciplinary record (factor (a)). He had personal and emotional problems (factor (b)). He made full disclosure (factor (e)). He had a good reputation, both as a lawyer and as a judge (factor (g)). Concerning factor (k), the accused states: “As to other sanctions imposed in this particular case, [the accused] has been sanctioned by losing his judicial position.” True, the accused has lost his judicial position, a substantial consequence, judged by any standard. But the obligations of a lawyer and of a judge, congruent though many of them are, are not governed by one disciplinary process, and for good reason.

At risk in the judicial fitness proceeding was the accused’s public office. At issue here is whether the accused’s misconduct is serious enough to require the loss, temporarily or permanently, of his license to practice law. The accused’s conduct as a judge is measured by the Code of Judicial Conduct and statutes. That measure was made by the Commission on Judicial Fitness and Disability, and it found that the accused should be removed from office. He resigned before this court could act on the Commission’s recommendation. Today, the accused’s conduct is measured by rules that determine whether lawyers can continue to practice law.
In evaluating the misconduct, we also examine aggravating factors. ABA Standard 9.22, which lists 10 aggravating factors, provides:

"Aggravating factors include:

"(a) prior disciplinary offenses;
"(b) dishonest or selfish motive;
"(c) a pattern of misconduct;
"(d) multiple offenses;
"(e) bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary proceeding by intentionally failing to comply with rules or orders of the disciplinary agency;
"(f) submission of false evidence, false statements, or other deceptive practices during the disciplinary process;
"(g) refusal to acknowledge wrongful nature of conduct;
"(h) vulnerability of victim;
"(i) substantial experience in the practice of law;
"(j) indifference to making restitution."

We find that the accused acted from a dishonest or selfish motive (factor (b)); there was a pattern of misconduct and multiple offenses (factors (c) and (d)); and there were vulnerable victims (factor (h)). The mitigating factors are, in a substantial way, balanced by the aggravating factors. None of the mitigating factors are so compelling as to convince us that a sanction less than disbarment is appropriate.

Because the accused’s misconduct is so great, because the nature of the misconduct is so destructive of truth and honesty, because public confidence in the integrity of the legal profession is so important, and because appropriate discipline deters unethical conduct, we conclude that the accused must be disbarred.

The accused is disbarred.

William J. HEDGES,

Review of decision of the Trial Panel of the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board.

Argued and submitted November 6, 1991.

PER CURIAM

The accused is suspended from the practice of law for 63 days from the effective date of this decision. Costs to the Oregon State Bar.
PER CURIAM

This is an automatic and de novo review of a lawyer disciplinary proceeding. ORS 9.536(1); BR 10.1; BR 10.6. The Oregon State Bar (Bar) has charged the accused with violations of five sections of the Code of Professional Responsibility: DR 6-101(B), neglect of a legal matter; DR 1-102(A)(3), misrepresentation; DR 9-101(B)(3) and (4), failure to maintain complete records of client funds and failure to pay funds in a lawyer's possession which the client is entitled to receive; and DR 1-103(C), failure to cooperate in an official investigation.

The trial panel found the accused guilty of all charges and recommended that he be suspended from the practice of law for 63 days. On review, the accused challenges the trial panel's findings of guilt in relation to the violations of DR 6-101(B) and DR 9-101(B)(3) and (4) and its recommended sanction. The Bar argues that the accused is guilty of all charged violations and argues for a longer suspension. The Bar has the burden of establishing ethical misconduct by clear and convincing evidence. BR 5.2. "Clear and convincing" means highly probable. In re Johnson, 300 Or 52, 55, 707 P2d 573 (1985). We affirm the trial panel's findings of guilt and impose a suspension of 63 days.

On August 15, 1988, Trudy and Michael Harmon retained the accused to represent them in a dispute with two individuals named Hayes and Potter, to whom the Harmons had sold a mobile home under contract. The Harmons also sought damages for any harm done to the mobile home. Hayes and Potter apparently had defaulted on the contract and were causing waste to the mobile home. The Harmons gave the accused $750 for his representation of them. The accused filed a complaint on the Harmons' behalf in the district court, naming as defendants Hayes, Potter and Richardson, the owner of the property where the mobile home was located. Thereafter, the accused effected service of process on the defendants.

During October and November of 1988, the accused negotiated with Richardson's lawyer. The accused agreed to dismiss the action against Richardson in return for Richardson's promise to waive a lien that he had on the mobile ome and for his permission to remove the mobile home from is property. Because it was a condition of the settlement, Richardson’s lawyer asked the accused to file an order removing Richardson as a defendant. The accused never did.

On January 29, 1989, the district court issued a Notice and Judgment dismissing the Harmons’ complaint for want of prosecution. The accused took no action thereafter to reinstate the complaint.

Between November 22, 1988, and March 3, 1989, the accused had no contact with the Harmons. On several occasions, both before and after the dismissal of the Harmons’ complaint, Mrs. Harmon tried to contact the accused by telephone. He failed to return her calls.

On March 3, Mrs. Harmon contacted the accused and inquired as to the status of the case. He told her that he was unable to get in touch with Richardson’s lawyer, and that Richardson had not responded to their settlement offer, and that nothing was happening in the case. The accused did not tell the Harmons that the complaint had been dismissed nor did he mention the circumstances of the dismissal. In fact, they learned of that fact only after the Bar commenced its investigation of their complaint against the accused. At the end of their March 3 conversation, Mrs. Harmon dismissed the accused as the Harmons’ lawyer.

Also during their March 3 conversation, Mrs. Harmon requested an accounting of the fee that the Harmons had given to the accused. On March 13, she reiterated that request to the accused in writing. The accused did not comply with those requests at that time or ever. On March 15, 1989, the Harmons complained to the Bar about the accused’s representation of them in the matter described. Their complaint forms the basis of this case.

It was not until 14 months after the Harmons filed their complaint with the Bar that the accused reimbursed the Harmons for the $750 that they had given him, plus an additional $100. Thereafter, the Harmons dealt directly with Richardson and were able to regain possession of their mobile home.
During the Bar's investigation of the Harmons' complaint, the Disciplinary Counsel's office sent four letters to the accused (dated March 28, 1989, April 19, 1989, May 22, 1989, and June 5, 1989), requesting information about the Harmons' complaint. On May 4, 1989, the accused contacted the Bar and requested a three-day extension to respond. The Bar granted that request. The accused nonetheless failed to respond to the Bar's requests for information.

The Bar thereafter filed its complaint against the accused. At the trial panel's hearing, the accused admitted most of the Bar's allegations. He testified that the Harmons' case was a matter that he had just put aside and could not bring himself to attend to. He testified, however, that he never considered the dismissal of the complaint as significant because the statute of limitations had not run and he could refile the complaint. The trial panel found the accused guilty of all charges and recommended a sanction of suspension from the practice of law for 63 days. Because the suspension is over 60 days, review in this court is automatic. ORS 9.536(1); BR 10.1.

Neglect of a Legal Matter — DR 6-101(B)

DR 6-101(B) provides: "A lawyer shall not neglect a legal matter entrusted to the lawyer."

The accused concedes that he neglected a legal matter entrusted to him in violation of DR 6-101(B). He argues, however, that his neglect caused the Harmons no harm and that, in fact, they benefited from his representation, because they were able to get their mobile home back primarily as a result of his negotiation with Richardson's lawyer. His argument, he states, is "submitted more in mitigation than in denial of the allegation of neglect." We find that the accused violated DR 6-101(B).

Failure to Maintain Complete Records of Client Funds and Failure to Pay Funds in a Lawyer's Possession which the Client is Entitled to Receive — DR 9-101(B)(3) and (4)

DR 9-101(B) provides in part:

"A lawyer shall:

* * * * *
“(3) Maintain complete records of all funds, securities and other properties of a client coming into the possession of the lawyer and render appropriate accounts to the lawyer’s client regarding them.

“(4) Promptly pay or deliver to a client as requested by the client the funds * * * in the possession of the lawyer which the client is entitled to receive.”

Both rules impose obligations on lawyers regarding client funds. In re Howard, 304 Or 193, 203-04, 743 P2d 719 (1987). Thus, as a threshold question in determining whether those rules were violated, it must be determined that the money given by the client to the lawyer belonged to the client and not to the lawyer. Id.

Here, the accused argues that there is not clear and convincing evidence that the money paid to him by the Harmons was not a non-refundable fixed fee. His argument, we infer, is that if the Harmons’ payment was a non-refundable fixed fee, then he had no duty to account for those funds and no duty to return them. As with the previous violation, he states that his argument is “[i]n mitigation more than direct claim of error.”

The record shows that the accused and the Harmons’ oral agreement was that the accused required “a fee up front of $750 to be used towards doing all of this,” i.e., pursuing the action against Hayes and Potter. That type of agreement is a classic advance fee agreement where ownership of the money is unquestionably with the client until it is earned by the lawyer. Opinion of Committee on Legal Ethics, No. 509, (citing C. Wolfram, Modern Legal Ethics 506 (1986)). 1 After the accused received the $750 from the Harmons, he placed it in his client trust account. He admitted that, had it been a non-refundable fixed fee, he would have placed the money in his office account. There was no written agreement here that this fee would be a non-refundable fixed fee, and where such a fee arrangement is used “the designation of the fee as non-refundable must be made by a clear and specific written agreement between client and lawyer." Opinion of Committee on Legal Ethics, No. 509, supra. We find that the $750 were client funds such that the accused's ethical obligations under DR 9-101(B)(3) and (4) were invoked.

1 Legal Ethics Opinion No. 509 was approved by the Board of Governors in 1986. In 1991, a new book, Oregon Formal Ethics Opinions (Oregon CLE 1991), with new formal ethics opinions was published. At the same time, all prior formal opinions, published in the Oregon State Bar Professional Responsibility Manual, were withdrawn. A companion book, The Ethical Oregon Lawyer (Oregon CLE 1991) also was published in 1991. That book reviews the principal issues of legal ethics and professionalism likely to be of significance to Oregon lawyers.

There is no dispute that the Harmons requested an accounting of their funds, that the accused promised to provide one, and that he failed to. A lawyer who fails to render appropriate accounts to the lawyer’s client regarding the client’s funds in the lawyer’s possession violates DR 9-101(B)(3). In re Boothe, 303 Or 643, 649, 740 P2d 785 (1987); In re Bridges, 302 Or 250, 253, 728 P2d 863 (1986). We find that the accused violated DR 9-101(B)(3).

The accused eventually did refund the Harmons’ money. DR 9-101(B)(4), however, expressly requires that such an action, when appropriate, be done “promptly.” The accused took 14 months to make the refund. That is not prompt. See In re Chandler, 303 Or 290, 295, 735 P2d 1220 (1987) (disciplining a lawyer under DR 9-101(B)(4) for taking just over 11 months to make a refund). We find that the accused violated DR 9-101(B)(4).

Other Ethical Violations

On review, the accused does not argue that he did not violate DR 1-102(A)(3), misrepresentation, and DR 1-103(C), failure to cooperate. We have reviewed the entire record and we find that the accused violated those rules.

Sanction

We turn now to the question of the appropriate sanction for the proven ethical misconduct. In that regard, we

---

2 DR 1-102 provides in part:

“It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

"* * * *"

“(3) Engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation[.]”

3 DR 1-103(C) provides:

“A lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary investigation shall respond fully and truthfully to inquiries from and comply with reasonable requests of a tribunal or other authority empowered to investigate or act upon the conduct of lawyers, subject only to the exercise of any applicable right or privilege.”

Under the ABA Standards, in determining the appropriate level of discipline, e.g., admonishment, reprimand, suspension, or disbarment, we apply four factors: the ethical duty violated, the lawyer's mental state at the time of the violation, the harm incurred as a result of the lawyer's misconduct, and the existence of aggravating or mitigating factors. In re Willer, 303 Or 241, 250, 735 P2d 594 (1987).

The accused violated four duties that he owed to his clients: the duty to handle their legal matter diligently, the duty of candor, the duty to render them an accounting of his time, and the duty to refund promptly any unearned money from the clients' advance fee. See ABA Standards, supra, at 5 (identifying duties owed to clients). Moreover, he violated a duty he owed to the legal profession: the duty to cooperate with the Bar's investigation. See ABA Standards, supra, at 5-6 (identifying duties owed to the legal profession).

The record reflects that the accused knowingly committed the charged disciplinary rule violations. The accused testified before the trial panel that "I knew what I was doing the whole time," that he knew that he should have informed the Harmons of the dismissal of their complaint, that he knew that he needed to provide the Harmons with an accounting, and that he knew that he needed to cooperate with the Bar. He testified: "[F]or some reason I set the file on my desk and stared at it on a daily basis and just did nothing.  [A]nd the same thing happened with the Bar complaint too."

As a result of the accused's misconduct, the Harmons suffered a loss of rental income from their mobile home and they were put to considerable inconvenience.

In mitigation, the accused, a member of the Oregon State Bar since 1981, has had no other complaints or charges against him. He presented credible evidence of general good character and good professional reputation in the local area in which he practices. He also offered his pro bono work as evidence of his good character.
In aggravation, the misconduct in this case occurred over a long period of time, beginning with the accused’s failure to follow through on the negotiation with Richardson’s lawyer and continuing until the trial panel’s hearing, when it appears the accused finally cooperated in resolving the Harmons’ complaint.

Oregon case law does not offer any precedent that deals with precisely the same charges that the accused faces in this matter. Some cases, however, are helpful. In In re Kissling, 303 Or 638, 740 P2d 179 (1987), this court imposed a 63-day suspension on a lawyer who violated DR 1-102(A)(3), DR 6-101(B), DR 7-101(A)(2) (intentional failure to carry out a contract of employment), and DR 7-102(A)(5) (making a false statement of law or fact). In Kissling, as in this case, the lawyer had no prior disciplinary record. See also In re Dugger, 299 Or 21, 697 P2d 973 (1985) (63-day suspension for violations of former DR 1-102(A)(4) (misrepresentation), DR 1-103(C), and former DR 6-101(A)(3) (neglect of a legal matter).

Considering all the ABA factors and this court’s case law, we conclude that the trial panel’s recommendation of a 63-day suspension is appropriate.

The accused is suspended from the practice of law for 63 days from the effective date of this decision. Costs to the Oregon State Bar.\(^4\)

\(^4\) This is the type of case in which this court may in the future consider following the procedure for affirmance described in BR 10.6. BR 10.6 provides that the Supreme Court shall consider each matter de novo upon the record and may adopt, modify, or reject the decision of the trial panel in whole or in part and thereupon enter an appropriate order. If this court’s order adopts the decision of the trial panel without opinion, the opinion of the trial panel shall stand as a statement of the decision of this court in the matter but not as the opinion of this court.

Review of decision of the Trial Panel of the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board.

Martha M. Hicks, Assistant Disciplinary Counsel, Oregon State Bar, Lake Oswego, argued the cause and filed the briefs for the Oregon State Bar.

Norman Sepenuk, Portland, argued the cause and filed the brief for the accused.

PER CURIAM

The accused is suspended from the practice of law for a period of 63 days commencing on the effective date of this decision. The Oregon State Bar is awarded its actual and necessary costs and disbursements. ORS 9.536(4).
This is a disciplinary proceeding instituted by the Oregon State Bar, charging in two causes of complaint that the accused engaged in conduct that violated standards of professional conduct. The Bar's first cause of complaint charges the accused with violating former DR 1-102(A)(3) (now DR 1-102(A)(2)) (illegal conduct involving moral turpitude), former DR 1-102(A)(4) (now DR 1-102(A)(3)) (conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation), and DR 7-102(A)(7) (conduct involving counseling or assisting the lawyer's client in conduct that the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent). The Bar's second cause of complaint charges the accused with violating former DR 1-102(A)(4) (now DR 1-102(A)(3)) (illegal conduct involving moral turpitude) and DR 7-102(A)(7) (conduct involving counseling or assisting the lawyer's client in conduct that the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent).

The trial panel found the accused guilty of violating all three disciplinary rules with respect to the first cause of complaint and not guilty of violating either disciplinary rule with respect to the second cause of complaint. The panel imposed a reprimand. The Bar seeks review of the sanction, arguing that a four-month suspension would be appropriate. The Bar does not seek review of the trial panel's findings with

1 Former DR 1-102(A)(3) provided:
   "A lawyer shall not:
   "* * * *
   "(3) Engage in illegal conduct involving moral turpitude."

2 Former DR 1-104(A)(4) provided:
   "A lawyer shall not:
   "* * * *
   "(4) Engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation."

3 DR 7-102(A)(7) provides:
   "In his representation of a client, a lawyer shall not:
   "* * * *
   "(7) Counsel or assist his client in conduct that the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent."

4 See supra, note 2.

5 See supra, note 3.
respect to the second cause of complaint. The accused did not seek review, but argues in response to the Bar's petition that the accused did not violate disciplinary rules and that, should a violation be found, the sanction should be at the lowest level possible.

We review de novo. ORS 9.536(3); BR 10.6. The Bar has the burden of establishing a violation of disciplinary rules by clear and convincing evidence. BR 5.2; In re Anson, 302 Or 446, 453, 730 P2d 1229 (1986). We find the accused guilty of violating former DR 1-102(A)(3), former DR 1-102(A)(4), and DR 7-102(A)(7), and suspend him from the practice of law for a period of 63 days.

FINDINGS OF FACT

We adopt the trial panel's findings of fact as clarified by the material in brackets (citations to the record omitted):

"1. At all time[s] relevant hereto[,] the Accused  was an attorney at law licensed to practice in the State of Oregon, having his office and principal place of business in Lane County.

"2. The Accused was employed by Gregory Harsch, a real estate developer who operated through several organizations: The Empire Financial Service, Inc., First Mark Real Estate Investors, Inc., and the Harsch Construction and Development Company (HCDC). Mr. Harsch and these entities will be referred to as Harsch. From September[,] 1980[,] until June, 1982, and again beginning in June, 1983, the Accused was employed as in-house counsel by Harsch.

"3. In the course of his real estate development business, Harsch borrowed money from the Emerald Empire Bank (Bank).

"4. In June, 1982, the Bank had reached or was approaching its lending limits to Harsch. These lending limits prohibit the Bank from placing too many loans with any one borrower. To avoid these lending limitations, the [President of the] Bank and Harsch devised a scheme whereby the Bank would make loans to other persons for the benefit of Harsch. These are so-called straw loans. Both the [President of the] Bank and Harsch were aware of the nature of these loans.

"5. In June, 1982, the Accused signed a promissory note, a security agreement and a nominee agreement. The terms of the promissory note were that the Accused borrowed, and agreed to repay the sum of $10,000 from and to the Bank. In the security agreement the Accused stated that he was the owner of a Minolta Copier and pledged the copier as security for the loan. In fact, the Accused was not the owner of the copier. Harsch was the owner of the copier and the [President of the] Bank knew this. In the nominee agreement the Accused agreed with Harsch that he was taking out the loan as agent for Harsch and for the benefit of Harsch. Harsch agreed that he would either repay the loan directly to the Bank or would reimburse the Accused if he were required to make payment to the Bank.

"6. In 1985 the Bank sued the Accused on the note. The Accused defended and pleaded as an affirmative defense that the loan was made for the purpose of complying with, or circumventing lending limits. The Accused was found liable, judgment was entered, and the Accused has satisfied the judgment.

"7. To finance his real estate development, Harsch used what has been labelled the LOB/LOT financing plan. Under this plan Harsch constructed houses for renters who had options to purchase the property. The renters took out construction loans and signed promissory notes. However, the renters did not receive these loans. The proceeds were paid by the Bank directly to Harsch. The idea was that after the houses were constructed, the construction loans would be replaced by permanent loans and new promissory notes secured by trust deeds would be signed. When the FDIC moved in, many houses were not constructed and the construction borrowers were held liable on the construction notes even though they had not received the benefits of the loans. The Accused did not devise this LOB/LOT financing plan. The extent of participation by the Accused, which was proved, was that he signed earnest money agreements with the construction borrowers on behalf of Harsch pursuant to a general power of attorney. When the FDIC sought to hold the construction borrowers liable, the Accused advised them they might be able to avoid liability because the loans were made to avoid [ ] the lending limitations on the Bank. The Accused states, and there was no evidence to the contrary, that he did not learn of these limitations or that these limitations had been exceeded until after any participation he had in the plan. The Accused did not know at the time he signed the earnest money agreements that sales or loans were being made in violation of lending limitations. The

DISCIPLINARY RULES VIOLATED

A. Former DR 1-102(A)(3)

Former DR 1-102(A)(3) provided that a lawyer shall not engage in illegal conduct involving moral turpitude. Conviction of a crime is not a prerequisite for violation of former DR 1-102(A)(3). In re Anson, supra, 302 Or at 453. The Bar argues, and the trial panel found, that the accused violated 18 USC § 1014 and 18 USC § 656, either directly or by aiding, abetting, or conspiring with others to violate 18 USC § 656.

It is unlawful knowingly to make any false statement for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of a bank insured by the FDIC on any application, commitment, or loan, or on any change or extension by renewal of the application, commitment, or loan. 18 USC § 1014. The accused denies making a false statement for the purpose of influencing the bank.

6 18 USC § 1014 (1988) (which had not been amended in any way relevant to this case since 1982) provided in part:

"Whoever knowingly makes any false statement or report, or willfully overvalues any land, property or security, for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of any bank the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or any member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation upon any application, advance, discount, purchase, purchase agreement, repurchase agreement, commitment, or loan, or any change or extension of any of the same, by renewal, deferment of action or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than two years, or both."

7 18 USC § 656 (1988) (which had not been amended since its enactment in 1948) provided in part:

"Whoever, being an officer, director, agent or employee of, or connected in any capacity with any Federal Reserve bank, member bank, national bank or insured bank, or a receiver of a national bank, or any agent or employee of the receiver, or a Federal Reserve Agent, or an agent or employee of a Federal Reserve Agent or of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, embezzles, abstracts, purloins or willfully misapplies any of the moneys, funds or credits of such bank or any moneys, funds, assets or securities intrusted to the custody or care of such bank, or to the custody or care of any such agent, officer, director, employee or receiver, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both; but if the amount embezzled, abstracted, purloined or misapplied does not exceed $100, he shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."
We find that the accused knowingly made false statements in two particulars. First, the accused signed a promissory note for a $10,000 loan, which the accused acknowledges was a straw loan entered into as a way for Harsch to receive more than the bank's lending limits would otherwise allow, by stating in the promissory note that the loan was made to the accused. The accused argues that, notwithstanding his agreement with Harsch and the bank president that Harsch would be looked to first for repayment, the accused was still liable on the note.

The accused knew that the reason for the straw loan was to avoid the bank's lending limits, and the evidence in the record establishes that he believed that he would not be personally liable on the note. He entered into a nominee agreement with Harsch, which provided that Harsch was liable for the note that the accused had signed. The accused stated in his deposition that, when he was asked to enter into the arrangement with the bank president and Harsch, he "was told that the bank was using this as a way to avoid their legal lending limits, and that they would not be looking to me for repayment." Further, when the FDIC sought to recover on the note in a civil action against the accused, the accused responded with an affirmative defense, which stated in part:

"[The note at issue] was prepared and received by [the bank] with the full knowledge and understanding that the document represented the indebtedness of some party other than the [accused]. * * *

"No debt, or other obligation, was ever entered into between the [accused] and [the bank]. * * *

"The previously described document was requested by [the bank] for the purpose of complying with, or circumventing, the lending limits governing all loan activities engaged in by [the bank]. * * *

"At all material times, [the bank] was aware that the underlying loan obligation represented by the previously described promissory note was not an obligation of the [accused], and the [bank] expressly agreed not to look to the [accused] for repayment of this obligation."
We find that the accused’s signature on the promissory note was a knowingly false statement about his intention to be bound by the terms of that note.

Second, in support of the promissory note, the accused signed a security agreement in which the accused stated that he was the owner of a Minolta copier and pledged the copier as security for the loan. The accused acknowledges that he did not own the copier, so that the statement was false, but argues that he was not aware that the security agreement pledged the copier. We do not find to be credible the accused’s claim that he was simply negligent in not reviewing the security agreement more closely or that the inclusion of Harsch’s copier as an item owned by the accused was a mere scrivener’s error.

The purpose of the entire transaction was to avoid the bank’s lending limits to Harsch. Listing collateral owned by Harsch under the accused’s name in a pledge agreement may have aroused the suspicion of others examining the document. The accused did not intend to be personally liable on the note, and the evidence does not support the accused’s claim of simple negligence regarding the security agreement. The accused entered into the transaction carefully and deliberately, even drafting and signing a nominee agreement with Harsch in an attempt to shield the accused from liability. By his own admission, the accused was aware that the bank’s documentation of other loans was sometimes poor. It is highly likely, therefore, that the accused reviewed these documents carefully. We find that the accused knew that the security agreement contained a false statement when he signed it.

The accused then argues that he did not violate 18 USC § 1014 because the statements in the promissory note and security agreement were not made to influence the actions of the bank. The record supports the accused’s claim that the bank president and Harsch devised this scheme to avoid the bank’s lending limits and that they asked the accused to sign the note and the security agreement. The note and the agreement were not in any way the accused’s idea, and he was aware that the bank president and Harsch both approved of the plan.
The reality is, however, that the bank would not have entered into another loan with Harsch under Harsch's name and that the conduct of the accused influenced the bank to enter into a loan on Harsch's behalf. The accused's participation in the scheme persuaded the bank to do something that it would not otherwise have done. Further, the accused testified that the arrangement was made because the bank president could not loan Harsch more money without loan committee approval and for the purpose of making the bank books look better. The scheme was intended either to prevent the loan committee from reviewing the transaction or to convince the loan committee or others that the loan was something that it was not. We find that the accused made the false statements in the promissory note and security agreement for the purpose of influencing the action of the bank in violation of 18 USC § 1014.

We further find that the illegal conduct involved moral turpitude. The conduct was intentional and involved false statements and dishonesty. See In re Chase, 299 Or 391, 400-402, 702 P2d 1082 (1985) (discussion of moral turpitude). The accused violated former DR 1-102(A)(3).^8

B. Former DR 1-102(A)(4)

Former DR 1-102(A)(4) provided that a lawyer shall not engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation. The Bar argues that the accused's conduct involved dishonesty and misrepresentation, and we agree. In determining that the accused violated 18 USC § 1014, we found that the accused made knowingly false statements to influence the actions of the bank. Those statements were dishonest and misrepresented the truth. The fact that the bank president and Harsch requested and approved of the ^8 18 USC § 656 provides that it is unlawful for a bank officer willfully to misapply the bank's money. See supra, note 7. The Bar argues that the accused aided or abetted or conspired with the bank president and Harsch willfully to misapply the bank's money by entering into the straw loan. We have found that the accused knowingly made false statements, but that he did not design or suggest the plan involving the straw loan. Under those circumstances, a violation of 18 USC § 656 would be based entirely on the same conduct that we have found to violate 18 USC § 1014 and would not be more culpable. The accused violated former DR 1-102(A)(3) by violating 18 USC § 1014; an additional violation of 18 USC § 656 would not affect the sanction under the circumstances of this case. Therefore, we decline to address whether the accused aided or abetted or conspired with a violation of 18 USC § 656.

---

false statements does not make the statements any the less false. The disciplinary rules govern the conduct of lawyers; misconduct is not something other than misconduct when it is approved by others. The accused violated former DR 1-102(A)(4).

C. DR 7-102(A)(7)

DR 7-102(A)(7) provided that, in a lawyer's representation of a client, a lawyer shall not assist the client in conduct the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent. The accused argues that, although he knew that the promissory note was an attempt to avoid lending limits, he did not know that those lending limits were set by law and either did not think about it or assumed that the limits were imposed by the bank. The accused did testify that it "crossed his mind" that the transaction might be illegal, but there is not clear and convincing evidence that the accused knew that it was illegal.

We find that the accused knew that obtaining a straw loan by having a party who would not be looked to for repayment sign as obligor was fraudulent and that he assisted his client, who was also his employer, in that conduct. See In re Hockett, 303 Or 150, 157-58, 734 P2d 877 (1987) (defining fraud in the disciplinary rule as fraud that would be actionable in Oregon in a tortious sense); Rice v. McAlister, 268 Or 125, 128, 519 P2d 1263 (1974) (setting forth elements of fraud). The accused violated DR 7-102(A)(7).

SANCTION

In deciding the appropriate sanction, this court refers for assistance to the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions (ABA Standards). In re Recker, 309 Or 633, 639-40, 789 P2d 663 (1990). ABA Standards 3.0 sets out the factors to consider: the duty violated, the lawyer's mental state, the potential or actual injury caused by the misconduct, and the existence of aggravating or mitigating factors. The trial panel in this case issued a reprimand, and the Bar requests that a four-month suspension be imposed.

The accused's conduct represents a failure to maintain personal integrity. ABA Standards 5.1. The accused acted intentionally, the most culpable mental state, ABA Standards at 6, in making false statements, and he intended the false statements to influence the actions of others.

The potential injury based on the accused’s conduct was a $10,000 loss to the bank. The lending limits that the accused helped to circumvent are designed to protect the bank from making bad loans. Security requirements for loans, which the accused helped violate, protect a bank by providing collateral from which the loan can be collected in the event of default. In this case, the accused helped Harsch receive $10,000 over the lending limit without intending to be held personally liable in the event of Harsch’s default. The bank eventually failed. In the process, the accused resisted repaying the $10,000, although he ultimately did enter into a settlement to satisfy the judgment against him, which by that time included the $10,000 principal, $5,000 in interest, and $19,000 in legal fees. The accused, of course, is not solely responsible for the bank’s failure, but bank failure is one type of injury that the rules violated were intended to prevent. We consider the injury to be serious.

The pertinent ABA Standards suggest that suspension is the appropriate sanction in this situation. See ABA Standards 5.12 (criminal conduct that seriously adversely reflects on lawyer’s fitness to practice). There are aggravating circumstances. See ABA Standards 9.22 (listing aggravating circumstances). The accused’s motive was dishonest, although not selfish. In addition, although the accused argues now that he was liable on the promissory note and that he understood at the time of signing the note that he was personally liable, in the interim the accused defended against a civil action to recover on the note by claiming that he was not personally liable.

There are also mitigating factors. See ABA Standards 9.32 (listing mitigating circumstances). The absence of a prior disciplinary record is a mitigating factor, although this factor is of limited significance because the accused had recently entered into the practice of law. The record reflects the accused’s cooperative attitude toward the proceedings, his evident remorse for the mistakes that he made, and his demonstrated upstanding character and reputation. The remoteness in time from the offenses and the delay in bringing them to disciplinary action is unfortunate, although the charged's intervening defense against the civil action involving the same conduct appears likely to have been a factor in the delay. The facts that the misconduct occurred ten years ago and that he has practiced law since that time with no disciplinary violations of which we have been made aware reflect positively on his fitness to practice law.

The seriousness of the accused's conduct, taken in the context of the aggravating and mitigating factors, calls for a suspension of 63 days. See In re Magar, 312 Or 139, 817 P2d 289 (1991) (60-day suspension imposed for dishonesty in endorsing a draft without authorization); In re Hillier, 298 Or 526, 694 P2d 540 (1985) (four-month suspension for failure to disclose to the court that transfer of title to real estate was pro forma only).

The accused is suspended from the practice of law for a period of 63 days commencing on the effective date of this decision. The Oregon State Bar is awarded its actual and necessary costs and disbursements. ORS 9.536(4).

days commencing on the effective date of this decision. The
and disbursements. ORS 9.536(4).

Unis, J., filed a dissenting opinion.
PER CURIAM

This opinion involves two separate disciplinary cases filed against the accused, James E. Williams. We have consolidated the two proceedings for this opinion.

A. THE FIRST PROCEEDING

In this disciplinary proceeding, the Oregon State Bar charged the accused with violations of DR 1-102(A)(3) (conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation), DR 1-102(A)(4)¹ (conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice), and DR 9-101(A)² (failure to maintain client’s funds in identifiable trust account). The trial panel of the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Board found the accused not guilty of violating DR 1-102(A)(4) and guilty of violating DR 1-102(A)(3) and DR 9-101(A), imposing a reprimand for each of the two violations.

The accused seeks review of the trial panel’s finding that he violated DR 1-102(A)(3). He does not seek review of the trial panel’s finding that he violated DR 9-101(A). We review de novo. ORS 9.536(3). The Bar has the burden of establishing disciplinary violations by clear and convincing evidence. BR 5.2.

“It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

* * * *

“(3) Engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation;

“(4) Engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice[.]”

² DR 9-101(A) provides:

“All funds of clients paid to a lawyer or law firm, including advances for costs and expenses, and escrow and other funds held by a lawyer or law firm for another in the course of work as lawyers, shall be deposited and maintained in one or more identifiable trust accounts in the state in which the law office is situated and no funds belonging to the lawyer or law firm shall be deposited therein except as follows:

“(1) Funds reasonably sufficient to pay account charges may be deposited therein.

“(2) Funds belonging in part to a client and in part presently or potentially to the lawyer or law firm must be deposited therein but the portion belonging to the lawyer or law firm may be withdrawn when due unless the right of the lawyer or law firm to receive it is disputed by the client in which event the disputed portion shall not be withdrawn until the dispute is finally resolved.”
The issues presented for review are (1) whether the accused made a misrepresentation, in violation of DR 1-102(A)(3), and, if so, (2) whether that violation, in addition to the violation of DR 9-101(A), warrants that the accused receive more than a reprimand. The Bar argues that the trial panel's finding that the accused committed two disciplinary rule violations is correct, but asks that the court impose a suspension of no less than 30 days for those violations.

Concerning DR 1-102(A)(3), we find: On December 2, 1986, Mr. and Mrs. Durham were landlords. Their tenant was Erin Nugent. On behalf of Nugent, on December 2, 1986, the accused wrote a letter to the Durhams. The letter read as follows:

"I represent Erin Casey Nugent who is your tenant in the house located at 1910 20th Street, NE, Salem, Marion County, Oregon.

"There are some serious maintenance and repair problems existing in that house, all of which are your responsibility under the Oregon Residential Landlord and Tenant Act (ORLTA). These include:

1. Repair entire electrical system
2. Repair roof leaks
3. Repair cooking stove
4. Provide adequate heat in all rooms
5. Repair or replace water heater
6. Repair bathtub drain
7. Repair broken and loose windows
8. Weatherize doors and windows
9. Clean chimney

"The first five items listed are essential services according to law. If you do not take immediate action to make those repairs and supply those essential services, my client will pursue the remedies available to her including but not limited to, causing the necessary work to be done and deducting the value of that work from her rent, and seeking damages in court.

"Further, until such time as you make arrangements to make all the repairs and perform all the maintenance set forth above as required by law, all rent payments will be placed in a trust account to assure your compliance.

"Please contact me immediately to make arrangements to effect these repairs, or if you wish to designate persons to do the work on items 1 through 5."
“All further communications or notices to my client under the ORLTA are to be directed in care of this office.”

After receiving that letter, Mrs. Durham talked to the accused on December 3 or 4. Before the trial panel, she testified as follows:

“Q Will you please tell the panel the content of your conversation with Mr. Williams?

“A Oh, you know, we were dumbfounded. I asked him what — you know, about the letter. And he reiterated that he had our rent money, and he said that we had 24 hours to make all the repairs on the list in his letter, or he would have them done —

“Q Okay.

“A — And sue us.

“Q Did you ask him anything?

“A I said what gives you the right to keep our rent money. We know nothing about this. And he says I have it. I can do it.

“Q Was anything else said to you by Mr. Williams at that time?

“A That threat was repeated two to three times. And I hung up on him.”

The accused denies making those statements to Mrs. Durham.

On December 10, 1986, the accused again wrote to the Durhams as follows:

“Because you have chosen to ignor [sic] written and oral demands that you provide essential services required under the Oregon Residential Landlord and Tenant Act, we will be making arrangements with licensed contractors to make needed repairs to the roof, electrical system, cooking stove and waterheater, and to install space heaters. The cost of this work will be paid out of the rent payments held in trust, at the rate of $200.00 per month as provided by law.

“We will not hesitate to invoke the full protection of the law to prevent any further harassment of my client by you, by phone or in person.” (Bold emphasis added.)

On December 10, the accused had none of the Durhams’ rent money in his trust account. On or about December 12, Nugent gave the accused a check for $250, which was to be placed in the accused's trust account. The accused did not deposit the $250 in his trust account.

Mr. and Mrs. Durham hired an Albany lawyer named Kent Hickam. Hickam wrote to the accused on December 13, 1986, as follows:

"I represent Steve and Karolyn Durham regarding the landlord/tenant matter concerning your client, Erin Casey Nugent. Please direct all future communications concerning this matter to me at the above address.

"* * * *

"You also have no basis to hold the December rental payment in your trust account. We insist that the rent be paid immediately as it is now overdue."

Hickam and Mr. and Mrs. Durham all testified that they understood, from the accused's letters, that he was holding Nugent's rent in his trust account to pay for the cost of repairs. Nugent moved out on or after December 15, 1986. The accused returned the check to Nugent, but he did not advise Hickam or the Durhams that the $250 was not in his trust account. He wrote a letter terminating the tenancy effective January 3, 1987. Not until several years later, when he was ordered to respond, did the accused tell his opponent that he held no funds in his trust account.

In its answering brief, the Bar states:

"The Bar does not dispute Mr. Williams' assertion that the December 12 [sic: December 2] and December 10 statements regarding his intent to hold Ms. Nugent's rent in trust were true when he made them. However, once he and Ms. Nugent altered their plans and he no longer intended to hold her rent in trust, the Durhams' (and their attorneys') reasonable beliefs were no longer true. An attorney's deliberate failure to correct a misimpression he or she has created is a misrepresentation in violation of DR 1-102(A)(3)."

Although this concession is ambiguous (we are unsure whether the Bar is stipulating that the letters of December 2 and 10 contained no misrepresentation, or whether the Bar is stipulating only that the accused "intended to hold her rent in trust" (emphasis added)), we give the accused the benefit of the doubt and will limit our discussion to whether the accused's "deliberate failure to correct a misimpression he or she has created is a misrepresentation in violation of DR 1-102(A)(3)."

The statement that "[t]he cost of this work will be paid out of the rent payments held in trust" was material to the issue whether Nugent had breached the rental agreement. The accused's statement that the rent would be held "in trust" suggested that the tenant was delivering (or had delivered) the rent to the accused, and that the rent money would be held (or was being held) by the accused for the benefit of the landlords, either for repairs or for rent, or both. The statement suggested that the tenant was not, and would not be, behind in her rent payments. Whether the landlords had a right to terminate the rental agreement "after 72 hours' written notice of nonpayment," and to take possession, turned on whether the rent was unpaid. ORS 90.400(2).

Moreover, in an action for possession based on nonpayment of rent, the tenant's right to counterclaim may turn on whether the tenant has deposited the rent into court. ORS 90.370. The accused himself testified that this was one of the reasons that he represented that the rent payments were held in trust. From the point of view of the landlords and their lawyer, the likely availability of rent money was a material consideration affecting the landlords' choice among available courses of action, and the accused intended to affect the landlords' potential choices of action.

Hickam's letter of December 13, 1986, establishes his belief that the rent was in the accused's trust account. It was reasonable for Hickam to so conclude. On December 13, 1986, whether or not the rent was in the trust account was material to the dispute between the Durhams and Nugent. When the accused returned the check to Nugent, he should have advised Hickam that the representation contained in the accused's earlier letters no longer was true.

A misrepresentation can be made by making an assertion that is not in accordance with the truth when made, Scott v. Francis, 314 Or 329, ___ P2d ___ (1992), or by failing to correct a representation that, although true when made, is no longer true in the light of information later acquired. In re Leonard, 308 Or 560, 784 P2d 95 (1989), although not precisely in point, is instructive. In Leonard, the accused represented potential lessees in a complex transaction involving the leasing of real property. The potential lessors were also represented by their lawyer. There were negotiations concerning whether future adjustment of rent should be indexed to the Consumer Price Index. The accused knew that the potential lessors would not agree to any adjusted figure that fell below the initial floor of $8,850 per month.

Eventually, the lease was drafted to provide that in no event could the rent be reduced below $8,850 per month. The accused later modified the lease by interlineation, the effect of which was to permit the rent to fall below $8,850 per month. The accused did not inform the lessors’ lawyer of the interlineation. He told Zeeb, a representative of another party to the complicated transaction, that the handwritten change “merely served to conform” one paragraph with another. 308 Or at 564. Zeeb communicated the information to the lessors, who initialed the lease without consulting with their lawyer. Three years later, the accused proposed to reduce the rent to $4,187.60. The other lawyer then learned, for the first time, of the accused’s change to the lease agreement.

The court held that, in unilaterally modifying the lease agreement when the accused knew such modification to be contrary to the intent of the lessors, and in failing to disclose this change, the accused violated DR 1-102(A)(4) (now DR 1-102(A)(3)). The opinion states:

“Likewise, ‘misrepresentation’ is a broad term encompassing non-disclosure of material fact; it need not be done with the intent to deceive or commit a fraud.” 308 Or at 569.

Similarly, in the instant case, whether the rent money was in the accused’s trust account was material in December 1986. The accused knew that the Durhams’ lawyer believed that the rent was in the trust account. The accused had an affirmative duty to disclose the truth to the Durhams’ lawyer when the accused returned his client’s check to her.

We find that the accused made a material misrepresentation in failing to correct the representations contained in his letter of December 10, when he knew that others believed that he held the rent in his trust account. Thus, the accused violated DR 1-102(A)(3).

B. THE SECOND PROCEEDING

In this proceeding, the complaint contains four charges against the accused. The first charge alleges that the accused violated DR 7-104(A)(1) of the Code of Professional Responsibility (communicating with a person that the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer). We find the accused guilty of this charge.

The second charge alleges a violation of DR 2-110(A)(2) ("a lawyer shall not withdraw from employment until the lawyer has taken reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the rights of the lawyer's client"). The trial panel found the accused not guilty of this charge. We also find the accused not guilty of this charge.

The trial panel found the accused not guilty of the third charge, and the Bar has not sought review of that finding.

The fourth charge alleges that the accused violated DR 1-103(C) ("A lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary investigation shall respond fully and truthfully"). We find the accused guilty of this charge.

Alleged Violation of DR 7-104(A)(1).

A tenant in a mobile home park was involved in a dispute with her landlord. She employed the accused to represent her. On October 2, 1987, the accused wrote to Thomas Rastetter, the landlord's lawyer, advising him that the accused represented the tenant.

ORS 90.600 requires the landlord to give at least 90 days' advance notice of a rent increase and an opportunity to meet with the landlord. In November 1987, after the tenant received a notice of a rent increase, the accused, with his client, met with Ms. Duckworth, the representative of the landlord, at the time and place specified by the landlord to discuss the proposed rent increase. At the meeting, the accused inquired if Mr. Rastetter was going to attend the meeting, and Ms. Duckworth said "no." The accused and his client then spent about an hour discussing the proposed rent increase with Ms. Duckworth.

DR 7-104(A)(1) provides:

"During the course of the lawyer’s representation of a client, a lawyer shall not:

“(1) Communicate or cause another to communicate on the subject of the representation, or on directly related subjects, with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by a lawyer on that subject, or on directly related subjects, unless the lawyer has the prior consent of the lawyer representing such other person or is authorized by law to do so. This prohibition includes a lawyer representing the lawyer’s own interests.”

The accused asserts that he “was authorized by law to represent his client at a statutory rent increase meeting even if the landlord chose not to have an attorney attend.”

ORS 90.600(1) requires a landlord who is raising the rent at a mobile home park to give each affected tenant an opportunity to meet with the landlord or a representative of the landlord to discuss the rent increase. Nothing in the text of ORS 90.600 suggests that the prohibition of DR 7-104(A)(1) does not apply in this situation. True, a tenant can choose to ask her lawyer to attend the meeting. Here, however, there was an ongoing dispute between the landlord and the tenant, and the accused knew that the landlord was represented by a lawyer, Rastetter. The proposed rent increase was the very matter in dispute between the landlord and the tenant. The accused was not “authorized by law” to communicate with Duckworth. We find the accused guilty of violating DR 7-104(A)(1).

3 There may be situations — such as statutes that require the giving of a notice, see, e.g., ORS 20.080 — that imply that authorization to make the communication exists, notwithstanding knowledge of the lawyer that the other person is represented by a lawyer. See also U.S. v. Schwimmer, 882 F2d 22 (2d Cir 1989) (prosecutor may question a defendant represented by counsel before grand jury under “authorized by law” exception). ORS 90.600 is not such a statute, and this is not such a case.

4 The accused also argues:

“If Williams were required to refrain from attending the meeting, then Duckworth, by choosing not to have her attorney attend, could have effectively negated Kimberly Baker’s right to representation. The authorized by law exception prevents that result.”
In re Williams

Alleged Violation of DR 2-110(1)(2).

The accused was charged with withdrawing from his representation of a client without taking steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the client. The trial panel found the accused not guilty of the charge. It would serve no purpose to set forth the facts on this charge. We agree with the trial panel’s finding and therefore proceed to the last charge.

Alleged Violation of DR 1-103(C).

The accused was charged with violating DR 1-103(C), which provides:

“A lawyer who is the subject of a disciplinary investigation shall respond fully and truthfully to inquiries from and comply with reasonable requests of a tribunal or other authority empowered to investigate or act upon the conduct of lawyers, subject only to the exercise of any applicable right or privilege.”

A preliminary question must be addressed. This charge was filed after the deposition of the accused was taken on November 4, 1991. The accused refused to answer a number of questions and gave evasive answers to other questions. The accused objected to the admissibility of the deposition on the ground that he had not been given the deposition to examine for correctness. ORCP 39F. The trial panel sustained the accused’s objection to introduction of the deposition on the ground that the accused had not had the opportunity to read and sign the deposition.

Depositions taken in Bar proceedings are governed by BR 4.5(b)(2), which provides that “[t]he manner of taking depositions shall conform as nearly as practicable to the procedure set forth in the Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure.” ORCP 39F provides:

“(1) When the testimony [of a witness at deposition] is taken by stenographic means, or is recorded by other than stenographic means as provided in subsection C.(4) of this rule, and if any party or the witness so requests at the time the deposition is taken, the recording or transcription shall be submitted to the witness for examination, changes, if any,

Had Rastetter chosen not to attend the meeting, knowing that the accused would attend, a different case would be presented. That case is not before us.
and statement of correctness. With leave of court such request may be made by a party or witness at any time before trial.

"(2) Any changes which the witness desires to make shall be entered upon the transcription or stated in a writing to accompany the recording by the party taking the deposition, together with a statement of reasons given by the witness for making them. Notice of such changes and reasons shall promptly be served upon all parties by the party taking the deposition. The witness shall then state in writing that the transcription or recording is correct subject to the changes, if any, made by the witness, unless the parties waive the statement or the witness is physically unable to make such statement or cannot be found. * * *

"(3) If no examination by the witness is requested, no statement by the witness as to the correctness of the transcription or recording is required.” (Emphasis added.)

The accused’s depositions were taken on two occasions, on November 4 and 11, 1991. At the time that the first deposition was taken, the accused made no request to read and sign the deposition. The chairman of the trial panel was present during the second deposition in order to rule on objections made by the accused at the first deposition. The only request by the accused that the first deposition be submitted to him for his examination came during preliminary discussions at the second deposition, in which the accused stated, “I would request a copy of [the November 4] transcript so I may review it as is my right under the Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure * * *.” The accused did not continue to press his request to examine the first deposition, apparently because Bar counsel forthwith agreed that he could do so. The accused made no further request in this regard, and he was given a copy of the deposition before trial. The accused’s reliance on ORCP 39F(1) is without substance.

The accused also objected to admission of the deposition transcript, citing BR 4.5. The accused’s position on this claim is:

"Bar Rule 4.5 provides that deposition practice shall conform to the Oregon Rule of Civil Procedure and further provides that:

" '(c) Discovery procedure. All discovery questions shall be resolved by the trial panel chairperson on motion.
Discovery motions, including motions for limitation of discovery shall be in writing. All such motions shall be filed with the trial panel chairperson and a copy mailed to Bar counsel or the accused, and disciplinary counsel.

"(e) Discovery sanctions. For failure to provide discovery as required under BR 4.5, the trial panel chairperson may make such rulings as are just, including, but not limited to, the following:

"(1) a ruling that the matters regarding which the ruling was made or any other designated fact shall be taken to be established for the purposes of the proceeding in accordance with the claim of litigant obtaining ruling; or

"(2) a ruling refusing to allow the disobedient litigant to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting the disobedient litigant from introducing designated matters in evidence."

"Hence, the proper procedure for the Bar to address any contention that Williams failed to appropriately respond to deposition questions was by motion to the trial panel chairperson. The chairperson was empowered to impose sanctions, up to and including establishment of claims or refusal to allow defenses. The procedure adopted by the Bar in Rule 4.5 is the only sensible approach to depositions in disciplinary proceedings.

"Otherwise, a pro se defendant such as Mr. Williams would be chilled from adequately representing himself by the threat of a new disciplinary charge or enhanced sanctions. Any other rule would discriminate against the pro se defendant, since presumably the Bar would not bring charges against a lawyer who merely followed an attorney's instructions in refusing to answer questions. A pro se defendant facing questioning from Bar counsel in a formal deposition would be placed at an extreme disadvantage if he or she could not make objections or refuse to answer questions while acting in the dual roles of advocate and witness." (Emphasis in original; footnote omitted.)

The trial panel excluded the depositions, noting that "the Bar never asked the trial panel chairman to provide sanctions as permitted under rule 4.5(e) of the Oregon State Bar Rules of Procedure." The availability of sanctions under BR 4.5 does not preclude charging a lawyer with unethical conduct under DR 1-103(C). We turn then to the depositions to determine whether the accused violated DR 1-103(C).

The Bar's amended complaint contained the following allegations:

"3.

"In or about November, 1988, the Accused attended a meeting between his client, a tenant, and Shirley Duckworth (hereinafter 'Duckworth'), the landlord or landlord's representative. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss a proposed rent increase and other matters which were the subject of a dispute between the Accused's client and Duckworth.

"4.

"At the time of the meeting, the Accused knew that Duckworth was represented by counsel and expected that the attorney would attend the meeting. When Duckworth appeared at the meeting alone, however, the Accused proceeded with the meeting and discussed issues relating to the dispute without first obtaining Duckworth's attorney's permission."

In his answer, the accused denied those allegations.

At the November 4 deposition, the accused was questioned about paragraphs 3 and 4 of the complaint as follows:

"Q Mr. Williams, in November of 1988, did you attend a meeting with your client and a Ms. — I believe it was Shirley Duckworth — regarding your client's tenancy?

"A Do you have my answer?

"Q Yes.

"A Read it.

"Q You deny that you attended the meeting?

"A Gee, that's very good. You can read.

"Q Do you deny that you attended a meeting in November of 1988?

"A Do you have my answer?

"Q Yes.

"A Read it.

"* * * * *
"Q Now, Mr. Williams, you know that the bar will present evidence and testimony that Ms. Baker was tenant of yours — excuse me, a client of yours?

"A That's fine.

"Q You deny that she was a client of yours?

"A I'm not answering the question.

"Q Because it's privileged, in your opinion?

"A Uh-huh.

"Q Do you remember Shirley Duckworth?

"A I couldn't say that I'd recognize her if I saw her.

"Q Do you recall a meeting of November 1988?

"A No, I don't recall a meeting in November of 1988.

"Q Do you deny there was a meeting in November of 1988?

"A No. I don't recall.

"Q Your answer denies it.

"A Then I will stand by my answer.

"Q You're denying that in November of 1988 you attended a meeting?

"A What does my answer say?

"Q It says it denies the allegations set forth in paragraph three.

"A Then I'm denying the — denying the allegations set forth in paragraph three.

"Q The entire allegation?

"A The entire allegation.

"Q You have the complaint. Would you like to review that before you make that statement?

"A I don't need to review it. My answer is accurate. If I wish to change it in my answer I'll let you know.

"Q Now's the time to let me know. You're under oath.

"A I choose to stand by my answer.

"Q I'm going to read this then ask you — and this may be time consuming, but I have to do it this way.

"Mr. Williams, in November of 1988, did you attending a meeting between your client, Kimberly Baker, and Shirley Duckworth and the — and the purpose of the meeting was to discuss a proposed rent increase as a subject dispute between your client and Ms. Duckworth? Do you admit or deny that?

"A You have my answer. Read it.

"Q It denies it.

"A If that's what it says, I'll stand by my answer.

"Q Mr. Williams, you understand you're under oath right now?

"A Yeah. I understand I'm under oath. And I also know that when I signed my answer, that that was the equivalent of an oath, as well. I'll stand by my answer. I'm not going to repeat my answers here.

"Q Regarding paragraph four, at the time of the meeting in November of 1988, did you know Ms. Duckworth was represented by counsel?

"A I'm not going to respond to any more questions that I've already answered in the answer.

"Q Your answer was denial. Are you denying that you knew she was represented by counsel?

"A If you don't get on to another subject fairly quickly, I'm going to leave. You're wasting my time. You haven't asked me one substantive question in 40 minutes.

"* * * *

"Q Did you understand at that meeting that Ms. Duckworth was represented by counsel?

"A No, I didn't."

From our examination of the depositions (and the accused's answer to the Bar's complaint, as well), we are convinced that the accused responded neither fully nor truthfully. Therefore, a violation of DR 1-103(C) has been made out.

We agree with the accused that an accused "facing questioning from Bar counsel in a formal deposition would be placed at an extreme disadvantage if he or she could not make objections or refuse to answer questions while acting in the dual roles of advocate and witness." Disciplinary proceedings before trial panels are adversary proceedings. Our ruling does not intend to foreclose any objection that has a basis in fact or law, actual or theoretical. Here, other objections made by the accused had some basis, actual or theoretical. We have no doubt, however, that many of the accused’s objections had, as their justification, nothing more than the venting of displeasure at the Bar for bringing these proceedings.\(^5\) The portions of the examination set forth above demonstrate that the accused was simply saying to the Bar, “I don’t like what you are trying to do to me, and I will refuse to cooperate.” That created the foundation for a further charge of a violation of DR 1-103(C).

C. SANCTION

This court frequently looks to the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions (1986) in considering sanctions for unethical conduct. Those standards call for consideration of four factors.

1. The Ethical Duty Violated.

   By leading the opposing parties and their lawyer to continue to believe that he held his client’s rent payments in trust, when he did not, the accused violated a duty owed to the legal system. ABA Standard 5.

   We have also found the accused guilty of communicating with a person known to be represented by a lawyer, DR 7-104(A)(1), and failing to respond fully and truthfully in the course of a disciplinary investigation, DR 1-103(C). In so doing, the accused violated a duty owed to the legal system.

2. The Lawyer’s Mental State.

   “Intentionally” is the most culpable mental state defined by the ABA Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions. An act is “intentional” if it is done with conscious objective or purpose to accomplish a particular result.

   The accused acted intentionally when he failed to correct the representation that led the Durhams and their lawyers to believe that his client had entrusted her rent to him. We also find that the accused acted intentionally in

---

\(^5\) We note the possible application of DR 7-102(A)(1) and (5), which state that a lawyer, in representing a client, “or in representing the lawyer’s own interests,” shall not “(1) * * * assert a position, conduct a defense, delay a trial, or take other action * * * when the lawyer knows or when it is obvious that such action would serve merely to harass * * * another” nor “(5) [k]nowingly make a false statement of law or fact.”
contacting a represented party and in failing to cooperate with the Bar.

3. The Extent of Injury, Actual or Potential, Caused by the Misconduct.

Because the purpose of professional discipline is to protect the public, an injury need not be actual, but only potential, in order to support the imposition of a sanction. The accused’s misrepresentations regarding Nugent’s December 1986 rent apparently resulted in no injury to his opposing parties or opposing counsel. There was, however, a potential injury, because whether the rent had been “paid” by delivery of the rent to the accused potentially affected the landlords’ rights.

In the Duckworth matter, there was the potential that the accused’s wrongful communication with Ms. Duckworth might have prejudiced the landlord’s interests. The accused’s noncooperation with the Bar created injury to the profession and the ability of the Bar to investigate the conduct of lawyers.

4. Aggravating and Mitigating Factors.

In the first proceeding, mitigating factors evidenced on the record are interim rehabilitation (ABA Standard 9.32(j)) and the absence of a dishonest or selfish motive (ABA Standard 9.32(b)). There are two aggravating factors, substantial experience in the practice of landlord-tenant law (ABA Standard 9.22(i)) and the accused’s refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct (ABA Standard 9.22(g)).

In the second proceeding, aggravating factors include: a pattern of misconduct; refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of the conduct; and substantial experience in the practice of law. ABA Standard 9.22(c), (g), and (i).

Misrepresentation is a serious violation of the disciplinary rules. Oregon ethics law contains several cases in which lawyers who have been found guilty of only one charge of dishonesty have received suspensions ranging from two to four months. In In re Fuller, 284 Or 273, 586 P2d 1111 (1978), a lawyer was suspended for 60 days for violating DR

1-102(A)(4) (current DR 1-102(A)(3)) and ORS 9.480(4) (current ORS 9.527(4)) (willful deceit or misconduct). In In re Hiller and Janssen, 298 Or 526, 694 P2d 540 (1985), the lawyers were suspended for four months for violating DR 1-102(A)(4) (current DR 1-102(A)(3)) and ORS 9.460(2) (failure to employ only those means that are consistent with the truth, and seeking to mislead the court).

Oregon precedent offers another line of cases in which lawyers have received reprimands for single acts of misconduct. In In re Hubert, 265 Or 27, 507 P2d 1141 (1973), a lawyer who failed to correct an inadvertent misrepresentation to the court after he discovered the incorrectness of his statement received a reprimand. In In re Miller, 287 Or 621, 601 P2d 789 (1989), a lawyer was reprimanded for failing to advise persons depositing bail for his clients that the bail would be returned to the clients and not to the depositors and for further failing to advise these individuals that his fee would be paid from the bail money deposited. In In re Simms, 284 Or 37, 584 P2d 766 (1978), a lawyer was reprimanded for signing a client’s name and then notarizing the signature.

Considering the violations in both proceedings, given the duties violated and the extent of actual or potential injury, the analysis under the ABA Standards strongly suggests that a suspension is appropriate in this case. The fact that there are multiple charges and aggravating circumstances also suggests that a suspension is appropriate.

For his violations in both proceedings, we order that the accused be suspended from the practice of law for a total of 63 days commencing on the effective date of this decision. The Oregon State Bar is awarded its actual and necessary costs and disbursements. ORS 9.536(4).

UNIS, J., dissenting.

In the first of the two disciplinary proceedings involved in this case (discussed in Parts A and C of the majority opinion), the trial panel found, the Bar does not dispute, and the majority struggles to accept, that the intent of the accused was accurately represented by the letters of December 2 and December 10 at the time that he wrote them, i.e., that at the time the accused wrote the December 2 and 10 letters, he intended to hold Nugent's rent payments in trust. See 314 Or at 535. The majority bases its finding of a misrepresentation on the accused's failure to inform landlords several days later that his client's plans had changed and that the accused had been instructed not to hold the rent money in trust because his client intended to terminate the tenancy. The majority concludes that "whether the rent money was in the accused's trust account was material in December 1986." 314 Or at 537.

Although the majority concludes that the alleged misrepresentation was intentional and material, the majority does not define the term "material." Rather, the majority confuses the significance of the facts in light of the landlords' statutory rights. The majority derives the materiality of the alleged misrepresentation from the landlords' rights in ORS 90.400(2) based on the significance of whether "rent was unpaid" and in ORS 90.370 based on the significance of whether "tenant has deposited the rent into court." 314 Or at 536. The answer to both of these questions is totally independent of whether the rent was being held in trust by tenant's lawyer. That is, rent is not paid under ORS 90.400(2) by depositing it in trust with one's lawyer, and rent is not deposited into court under ORS 90.370 by depositing it in trust with one's lawyer. Even if the accused was holding the rent money in trust, the rent was still unpaid and had not been deposited into court.

Although the majority accepts the trial panel's finding, which the Bar does not dispute, that the accused's representations in the December 2 and 10 letters were true when he made them (i.e., that at the time the accused wrote the December 2 and 10 letters, he intended to hold Nugent's rent payments in trust, but was not yet doing so), 314 Or at 535, the majority makes statements contrary to this finding which are significant to the majority's analysis.

1 The trial panel found that "[a]t the time the Accused wrote the two letters to the Durhams the representations contained therein were true." The Bar in its brief before this court agrees with that finding: "The Bar does not dispute [the accused's] assertion that the December 12 [sic: 2] and December 10 statements regarding his intent to hold Ms. Nugent's rent in trust were true when he made them." (Emphasis added.)

2 I disagree with the majority's conclusion, 314 Or at 546, that any misrepresentation was intentional.
The majority states that the accused's statement that "[t]he cost of this work will be paid out of the rent payments held in trust" "suggested that the tenant was not behind in her rent payments." 314 Or at 536. Rent was due on December 1. The majority accepts that the representations in the accused's letters were true when he made them. The majority states as fact (and it is not disputed) that "[o]n December 10, the accused had none of the Durhams' rent money in his trust account." 314 Or at 534. Therefore, it is clear that on December 10 the tenant was behind in her rent payments and that the majority agrees that the accused did not state to the contrary. Nevertheless, the majority bases its finding that the accused made a material misrepresentation on the conclusion that the accused's statements "suggested that the tenant was not behind in her rent payments." 314 Or at 536. Thus, the majority is basing its finding of intentional material misrepresentation on representations that even the majority agrees the accused did not make.

The majority suggests that the "tenant's right to counterclaim may turn on whether the tenant has deposited the rent into court. ORS 90.370." 314 Or at 536. In determining why the accused's statements were intentional, material misrepresentations, the majority concludes that "[t]he accused himself testified that this [determination of the right to counterclaim] was one of the reasons that he represented that the rent payments were held in trust." 314 Or at 536 (emphasis added). The trial panel found, the Bar accepts, and the majority accepts that the accused did not represent in his letters that he was holding rent money in trust. Unfortunately, the majority resorts to statements contradicting the very premise it accepts in order to find an intentional, material misrepresentation.

In addition, the majority states that "[t]he accused's statement that the rent would be held 'in trust' suggested

3 The majority includes in its analysis two other parenthetical statements that contradict its acceptance of the finding that the representations in the December 2 and 10 letters were true when they were made: "The accused's statement that the rent would be held 'in trust' suggested that the tenant was delivering (or had delivered) the rent to the accused, and that the rent money would be held (or was being held) by the accused for the benefit of the landlords, either for repairs or for rent, or both." 314 Or at 536 (emphasis of majority's statements contradicting majority's premise added).
that the tenant was delivering (or had delivered) the rent to the accused, and that the rent money would be held (or was being held) by the accused for the benefit of the landlords, either for repairs or for rent, or both.” 314 Or at 536. By suggesting that money which the accused was holding or would hold in trust was “for the benefit of the landlords,” the majority misconstrues the nature of the lawyer’s role and implicitly suggests that the accused should have done something which itself would have been a disciplinary violation, even while the majority must strain to conclude that what the accused did was a disciplinary violation. Lawyers are obligated by disciplinary rule to deposit client funds in a “separate interest bearing account for a specific and individual matter for a particular client,” DR 9-101(C)(3)(a), unless they are in a pooled account with subaccounting, DR 9-101(C)(3)(b), or are nominal or held for a short period of time, DR 9-101(C)(2). DR 9-101(B)(4) provides that “[a]lawyer shall  [p]romptly pay or deliver to a client as requested by the client the funds, securities or other properties in the possession of the lawyer which the client is entitled to receive.” The majority’s suggestion that money held in trust by the lawyer would be held for the benefit of the landlords rather than for the benefit of the client contravenes the very nature of the attorney/client relationship and the rules of client trust funds.

The majority must strain too hard to establish a disciplinary violation. That is not palatable, particularly when the standard of proof is clear and convincing evidence.

I would hold that the Bar has failed to establish by clear and convincing evidence that the accused violated DR 1-102(A)(3), i.e., that there was a misrepresentation or that, if there was a misrepresentation, it was intentional and material. Notwithstanding the analytical problems in the majority opinion, I would hold that the Bar has failed to establish, as the majority holds, see 314 Or at 537, that it was material for landlords to know whether the rent money was in the accused’s trust account in December 1986.4 I therefore dissent from Part A of the majority opinion. I would impose a 4 The Bar argues that there were continuing misrepresentations for failure to inform landlords after the termination of the tenancy (i.e., after December) that he was not holding money in trust. In my view, even assuming, arguendo, a material misrepresentation in December, the changed circumstance of the termination of the lesser sanction than the sanction imposed by the majority in Part C consistent with my conclusion that the only violations established are those discussed in Part B, with which I agree.

... that there was no continuing misrepresentation after that date. That is, even if the question whether the accused was holding rent in trust was legally significant in December, it was no longer relevant after December, and termination of the tenancy was adequate to apprise landlords of this fact without affirmatively informing landlords that the accused was no longer holding rent money in trust.

If there was a continuous misrepresentation beyond December, the accused's disciplinary rule violation would be more severe. I therefore take the majority's silence on the issue of a misrepresentation continuing after December to imply that no continuous misrepresentation existed. If that is the case, I agree.
