Meeting Date: November 19, 2020
Memo Date: November 12, 2020
From: Jade Priest-Maoz, MCLE Program Manager, MCLE Committee Liaison; and Amber Hollister, OSB General Counsel
Re: Proposed Amendments to MCLE Rules and Regulations to:
1. Restructure MCLE accreditation application fees;
2. Restructure attendance reporting and credit posting requirements; and
3. Clarify CLE program sponsor audits.

Action Recommended

Bar staff and the MCLE Committee recommend the BOG approve the attached proposed amendments to the MCLE Rules and Regulations to restructure the MCLE accreditation application fees and attendance reporting processes, and to clarify the MCLE Program Manager’s authorization to audit CLE program sponsors.

Background and Discussion

At its September 18, 2020 meeting, the MCLE Committee unanimously approved proposed amendments to the MCLE Rules and Regulations to recover from the permanent impact of COVID 19 on the MCLE Program revenue, and to elaborate on the MCLE Program Manager’s authority to audit CLE program sponsors.

MCLE PROGRAM ACCREDITATION APPLICATION FEES

Member Application Fees

With the ease of submitting program accreditation applications online, and the new reluctance of sponsors to submit program applications in attempt to cut costs due to COVID, individual members are submitting more applications than in the past. The current MCLE Rules permit at no cost if the member is not affiliated with the program sponsor. Some states only allow program sponsors, to apply for accreditation of programs. Of the states that also allow members to apply, only 5 allow applications at no charge to the member. OSB has been very generous by subsidizing the processing of member applications, but can no longer sustain this model given the shift in CLE sponsor application practices.

The proposed amendments to the MCLE Rules and Regulations still allow members unaffiliated with the program sponsor to apply for accreditation at no cost, but only if they are the only Oregon lawyer who attended and the sponsor is located outside of Oregon. Members not meeting this criteria, but unable to pay an accreditation application fee, could request a waiver pursuant to MCLE Rule 9. This ensures members will not be denied credit earned from a provider out of state who is unwilling to apply for accreditation in Oregon, while preventing most sponsors from shifting the burden of applying for accreditation of their programs onto bar member customers in order to circumvent MCLE application fees. This also encourages Oregon bar members to attend locally sponsored CLE programs and support OSB member groups. This change is projected to result in approximately $50,000 increase in annual OSB revenue.

Series Rate

MCLE Regulation 4.300(c) allows program sponsors to pay a series rate of $40 total for three program applications for programs that are one hour or less and held within 3 consecutive months. The series rate was created to assist local sponsors who offer regular CLE programming at low or no cost to Oregon bar members. The language of the regulation; however, does not restrict which sponsors can avail themselves of the series rate.

The bar’s electronic operating system cannot administer the series rate billing structure; so bar staff must keep track of each series and manually adjust invoices for each program. Furthermore, sponsors are digging deeper into MCLE rules nationwide for savings opportunities and discovering Oregon’s series rate. In fact, 31 sponsors currently use the series rate, and only 5 of those sponsors are OSB sections or local bar associations. The rest include large national organizations, law firms, and other for profit sponsors who charge fees to Oregon bar members to attend their programs. These are not sponsors OSB in in a position to subsidize.

The proposed amendments eliminate the series rate. However, they offer a lower rate of $25 for one hour programs offered to all Oregon bar members at no charge. This preserves the intent of the series rate, and with less restrictions, as it does not require programs be held within a three month period. Based upon data over the last 12 months, this proposed amendment would increase MCLE Program annual revenue by approximately $6,000.

Tiered Accreditation Application Fee Structure

The current MCLE program accreditation application fee structure contains only two tiers: $40 for programs up to four hours and $75 for longer programs. The proposed amendments create the following four tiered system that more accurately reflects the relative time to process applications:

1. $25 for programs 60 minutes or less that are offered free to all OSB members,
2. $40 for programs up to four hours long,
3. $75 for programs more than four hours but not more than 8 hours, and
4. $125 for programs more than 8 hours.

The MCLE Committee appreciated the goal of this tiered system and even suggested higher rates for the longest programs.
Sponsor Late Fee

The MCLE Rules and Regulations impose a late fee only on late applications for live programs. Curiously, no late fee is assessed for late applications for recorded programs. Due to COVID, live programming has decreased and recorded programming increased. Adding a late fee for recorded programs will encourage sponsors to timely submit accreditation applications so Oregon bar members can update their transcripts within a reasonable time after completing a program. No late fees will be charged for member applications.

CLE CREDIT REPORTING

The trend nationwide is to require sponsors to enter program attendance directly onto attorney transcripts through an access portal on state bar websites, or pay a per credit reporting fee for bar staff to post the credits. Bar staff and the MCLE Committee recommend Oregon follow suit. This will help alleviate the revenue deficit caused by COVID, and the MCLE Department’s electronic operating system can be programmed to support this plan.

Currently, of the 47 states that require minimum continuing legal education, 24 states require sponsors to report attendance, and 16 states impose fees associated with attendance reporting, including western states such as Washington, Utah, and Nevada. Per credit fees for reporting attendance range from $0.75 to $4, and some states charge late reporting fees.

The proposed amendments to the MCLE Rules and Regulations establish a system whereby CLE sponsors can post credits earned by Oregon attorneys through their programs directly onto the attorneys’ MCLE transcripts online at no cost, or pay a $1 per credit processing fee for bar staff to post the credits. No fee will be charged to attorneys who self-report.

The process of inputting credits via the bar’s online portal is expected to be faster and easier for sponsors than the current system. This will help OSB member groups with administration of their CLE programming. The system will also eliminate the expense of a seasonal data entry temp, which will result in a savings of over $6,000.

SPONSOR AUDITS

MCLE Regulators nationwide are increasing their audits of sponsors due to a rise in sponsor false advertising and other noncompliance with MCLE rules and regulations. We have recently experienced a sponsor infraction in Oregon when a sponsor refused to respond to the MCLE Program Manager’s request that they remove from their website incorrect and misleading statements about program accreditation in Oregon. The proposed amendments to the MCLE Rules and Regulations clarify the MCLE Program Manager’s authority to audit program sponsors, and require sponsor compliance.
Conclusion

Bar staff and the MCLE Committee recommend that the BOG vote to approve the proposed amendments for consideration by the Supreme Court at its December 1, 2020 public meeting.
