In 1914 Justice Benjamin Cardozo first articulated the medico-legal standard of informed consent in Schloendorff v. Society of New York Hospital. “Every human being of adult years and sound mind has a right to determine what shall be done with his own body...”

Today, in the midst of the worst pandemic in over 100 years, enabling clients to carry out their intent regarding end-of-life care is more important than ever. Join an experienced multi-disciplinary panel to explore the current range of tools and counseling strategies to empower your clients and their families when navigating end-of-life care.

- 9:00 Introduction to End-of-Life Care
Tim Nay, Law Offices of Nay & Friedenber,
Portland, OR
- 9:15 POLST: Co-Piloting, Not Hijacking, the Advance Directive
 In 1995 Oregon became the first state to introduce and codify the POLST to support, not supplant, the Health Care Advance Directive. Learn how the medical and legal professions can ensure that a person's wishes for care over a lifetime are elicited sensitively, recorded accurately, and honored when needed.
Dr. Susan Tolle, Director, Center for Ethics in Health Care, Oregon Health & Science University, Portland, OR
Fay Blix, Law Office of Fay Blix, Laguna Hills, CA
- 10:30 Break
- 10:40 Compassionate Conversations: Planning for the End-of-Life
 Who will speak for your clients when they can't, and how can they be reassured that their representative will follow their wishes if that time comes? Two experts will share ways to effectively discuss end-of-life-choices with clients, execute Health Care Advance Directives, and inform health care representatives accordingly.
Dr. Katie Stowers, Oregon Health & Science University, Portland, OR
Tim Nay, Law Offices of Nay & Friedenber,
