Gain an in-depth look at how disability law affects institutions of higher education and their students. Review the fundamentals of the Americans with Disabilities Act and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. Hear from attorneys who represent universities and students about some of the newest and most complex legal issues. Competing models of disability will be discussed, as well as international accessibility standards, the impact of technology on students with disabilities, and strategies beyond accommodation to meet disability related mandates. This unique program will provide insight about the disability accommodation process, including the experience about seeking accommodations in college and law school.
